Deer Leaps to His Death from Bridge SENATOR LODGE GROWS WEAKER

HANDSOME BUCK DEER JUMPED FROM PAWTUCKET BRIDGE

Stranger From the Woods Chased by Pack of Dogs Becomes Frenzied and Jumps to His Death in Rock-bed of Merrimack River

Frenzied by the vicious attacks of a pack of dogs driving him in swift flight through several thickly-settled thicketts in the vicinity of the Lowell end of Pawtucket bridge, a handsome buck deer about two years old, lately seeking a place of safety, started across the big bridge toward Pawtucketville, about 10:30 o'clock this morning, shot away from two approaching automobiles, and then took a desperate leap over the right concrete wall fence and landed on the rocks in the river bed more than 60 feet below. Death was practically instantaneous, spectators of the macabre tragedy said.

Scores of pedestals and motor car drivers witnessed the scene unusual, shocked by the picture of the deer making the flying leap many feet above the bridge fencing and circling far outward over river bank until it plunged headlong downward to the rock bed.

In the meantime, State Game Warden Crosby, driving his car over the bridge from School street and its desolate plunge to escape the human traffic on the bridge, Lowell police headquarters was promptly notified, and telephone messages to Lowell Humane Society, local game warden, and deputies were given. Deputy E. H. Houghton was sent to remove the body of the deer from the river bed. In the meantime, State Game Warden Crosby was not able to come and take charge of the carcass.

Deputy Houghton secured the services of several bystanders, and a truck, and, assisted by John Dressington and Leo Alings, managed to drag and lift the dead deer from its position partly covered by the river wash between jagged rocks on the river bed. It was not a hard task to carry the buck to the shore and then to the waiting truck. The animal was placed temporarily in William Mansfield's garage, rear of 40 Mammoth road, awaiting the arrival of State Game Warden Crosby.

Residents of School and Pawtucket streets told a Sun reporter that the deer had been "hanging around" upper Mammoth road district for several days past. Late last night, a farmer named Varnum had found a deer in his garden back of the house. The deer leaped away quickly when the farmer advanced toward him.

This morning, the police say, the same deer was chased by more than an hour by boys, accompanied by a number of dogs of all breeds, the buck appearing on the Lowell side of the river and apparently having crossed Pawtucket bridge or swim the Merrimack river above the bridge, during the night. Hundreds of citizens living in the neighborhood of the Pawtucket end of the bridge witnessed the morning chase of the frightened deer and the desperate gallop away over the bridgehead on the fast trail.

DROUGHT REMAINS UNBROKEN, AND FOREST FIRES RAGE

New Drought Record of Thirty-one Consecutive Rainless Days Has Already Been Set in New York—Boston Completing Its Thirtieth Day Without Rain

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The drought which has prevailed in New York, New Jersey and parts of New England during the last month remained unbroken today while more than a dozen forest fires burned unchecked in various parts of New York.

A new drought record of thirty-one consecutive rainless days already has been set in New York and Boston today was completing its thirtieth day without any rain of measurable quantity. The same conditions prevail within a radius of several hundred miles of Boston.

Adding to the perils of forest fires is the unusual warmth which many sections in the east have experienced

KLAN AND FOES NEAR CLASH FOLLOWING K. OF C. MAN'S DEATH

Throng Fill Streets at Berlin, N. H.—Extra Police on Duty—Iron Bar With Which it is Thought Victim Was Hit is Found

BERLIN, N. H., Nov. 8.—Rumors of an impending clash between the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klan faction in this part of the state have caused considerable speculation as to what may happen both here and at Whitefield, where the people are all wrought up over the finding of the body of James G. Travers, a former grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, in the mill pond. There is intense excitement.

Last night, the streets of the city were filled with people on account of widespread talk of a clash between the two factions. Deputy Marshal Alexander Stuart, in charge of the local police force, is maintaining extra vigilance because of several applications that have been made to him by citizens who reported that they feared Klan attacks and wished protection.

Candidate Threatened

Clarence D. Smith, local news agent and a candidate at the recent election for sheriff, as a democrat, was threatened by the present high sheriff, George Brown, a republican, who has held the position for the last 10 years.

During the campaign Smith received several anonymous threats. Late last evening he was called to the telephone and more anonymous threats were made to him. He engaged the threatener in conversation, holding him at the telephone while he caused the call to be traced to a telephone station where four men, who had sat out in a vacant house, had been still engaged in conversation with Smith. He was recognized, but not arrested.

Wednesday before last, at Mt. Forest, which overlooks the city, a huge flaming cross appeared, illuminating the whole city and visible for miles around.

The incident created intense excitement here and crowds rushed to the place by automobile and afoot. Valley after valley of shots were fired into the shrubbery near the foot of the cross. Later a search of the vicinity showed no trace of Klansmen having been there at the time of the shooting.

This affair, added to the incidents of last night have served to inflame the populace and to lead it to anticipate almost anything in the line of disorder.

At Whitefield interest in the cause of the death of Travers, whose dead body was found in the pond about 300 feet from his home early Wednesday morning, was intensified last night by the finding by his brother, Bernard Travers, of piece of iron pipe, which, it is intimated, may have been used in stunning the dead man. No wounds were found on Travers' body but there was an indentured wound behind the right ear.

County Collector Matthew J. Ryan is investigating and believes this is the weapon with which Travers was slain. It was murder, early Wednesday morning after reaching his own home, which he was about to enter. His

Liquor Cases in Court Continued

Violation of the Volstead law and his second within a week, he was fined $100 and sentenced to three months in the house of correction, which he appealed. Last Monday, he was fined $100 for illegal sale.

La Vergne was responsible, in a way, for his own arrest this morning. Although armed with a search warrant, the officer failed to find any liquor on the premises, and defendant strenuously maintained that he was engaged in no business. Just as the officers were about to give up the quest, a woman entered the establishment and asked for a pint. She was informed that none was to be had, but Officer Liston took a chance and said to La Vergne: "Why don't you give her one of those plates in your back pocket?" With this, La Vergne ran out the door, pulled a bottle from his "pocket" and attempted to throw it in the gutter. He was frustrated in the attempt, and accompanied the officers to the station. A second pint was found in another pocket.

The activities of the liquor squad yesterday afternoon and last night had no successful results. Fred Gauntlett paid a fine of $100 for illegal keeping. He was arrested in a Lee street lodging house after Patrolier Owen Conway, Frank O'Dea and Timothy Mahoney had secured evidence of illegal traffic. Romeo Hebert, proprietor of a restaurant at 450 Lakeview avenue, pleaded "not guilty" to illegal sale and was continued in $300 until Nov. 22. His place was raided by Officers Aldrich, Furey and Kongan. The same establishment was raided several weeks ago.

George Yordi pleaded not guilty to illegal sale and was likewise continued to Nov. 22. He was apprehended by the above officers in a store at 47 East Merrimack street last night.

OPENING MONDAY OF LAMP SHOPPE

Of interest to women is the announcement by Miss Marion Lougee that on Monday next she will open in Wyman's Exchange under the name of Marion Lougee, Inc., the Lamp Shoppe, for the design, manufacture and sale of lampshades of latest creations. The shoppe is located in Room 209-210, on the second floor, with large windows fronting in Central street.

For some time Miss Lougee has been connected with the French Specialty shop in Merrimack street and, through the medium of class instruction and shade designing, has made many friends and a splendid reputation in artistic craftsmanship.

In the Lamp Shoppe, Miss Lougee will carry an adequate line of wire frames and materials will solicit and give particular attention to special orders and will conduct free instruction classes daily and on Tuesday evenings.

Naturally, many women who have come under Miss Lougee's instruction at the French Specialty shop will welcome this opportunity to continue such work and will have a real interest in the success of her business.

Fire Alarm System On the Blink Again Continued

Chief Saunders reports that the indicators throughout the building registered the box as 1, while the bell counted the signal correctly. At the Branch street house neither the bell nor indicator counted the alarm and this company, which answers first alarms in the "40" circuits, had no indication of where the fire was until it was notified by the telephone operator at fire headquarters.

The other businesses throughout the city also reported either the bell or indicator, or both, out of order when the alarm sounded and were unaware of the number of the box until they had been notified by telephone from fire headquarters.

The "40" alarm district, which includes the Chelmsford street and Ayer City sections of the city, has been in poor condition for some time, Chief Saunders said this morning, and whenever an alarm is sounded, there are other companies in the city do not receive the box on their indicators. In many cases and have to wait until Hose 9 has notified headquarters and headquarters in turn has notified them by telephone of the location of the box from which the alarm was sounded.

If Hose 9 is out of its house answering a still or telephone alarm when a box in that district is sounded, Chief Saunders said, the department has no dependable way to tell which box is ringing in.

Up to the present time the department has been fortunate in that alarm breakdowns have occurred when only minor fires were in progress, but the chief is considerably alarmed for fear that the system will fail to respond when major fire breaks out and the department will be delayed in answering, allowing time for the fire to make great headway.

and upon his arrival could not find any fire, but found a considerable quantity of burned paper.

The papers, in his opinion, had been stuffed into the partitions and either set or caught fire, but the blaze had smothered itself before the apparatus arrived.

He made an examination of the premises and reported to Chief Saunders that the circumstances surrounding the fire were sufficiently suspicious to warrant a police investigation.

Further suspicions of incendiarism were created early this morning when Chief Saunders received a telephone call from a person representing himself as a tenant of the block who stated there had been several slight fires in the building of late and that a man had been seen on several occasions in the vacant tenement where the fire was, lighting matches.

With this evidence, Chief Saunders visited police headquarters and asked Captain David Petrie of the criminal investigation department to make a complete investigation into the circumstances surrounding the fire.

Captain Petrie viewed the premises this morning but nothing to report on the investigation.

SPECIMEN BALLOT

The city election commissioners have prepared a specimen ballot for the city primaries to be held next Tuesday, containing the names of nine mayoralty, ten school committee and thirty-one councilor-at-large candidates. The candidates are numbered.

SCOTT For Mayor

The political scramble is nearly over. You have heard the stories of the different candidates why they should receive your vote. A few of Scott's reasons are:

A business experience of over 25 years, starting at nothing and going up to the top in his line.

Honest and fair in all his dealings with the public. A plain common sense man.

The choice of a mayor by you is nothing more or less than the choice of a competent man into whose hands you would give the conduct of your own private affairs.

Naturally, many women who have come under Miss Lougee's instruction at the French Specialty shop will welcome this opportunity to continue such work and will have a real interest in the success of her business.

Many an adult who knew him in the days of his childhood will remember his generosity and kindness to children. Mr. Merrill, or "Charlie" Merrill as he was familiarly called, was a kind man, a friend to all, and a realist ready to assist in the many little acts of thoughtfulness that only a man of his character could conceive.

A lover of children, he will be missed by every child and girl in the neighborhood in which he lived.

When illness came upon him, his thoughts were only of the comfort and welfare of his wife who survives him. After a long illness, his spirit passed from this world, and his spirit passed into eternal life, a great void was left in the hearts of those who knew him and loved him.

Mr. Merrill had remained always for his pleasant smile, his sincere friendliness and his ever-ready assistance to those in sorrow or distress.

REMOVAL OF POLICEMAN

Statement by Chairman Belleville of Chelmsford Board of Selectmen

Chairman William D. Belleville of the Chelmsford board of selectmen, today issued the following statement in which he presents in detail his official attitude in the controversy that exists over the recent removal of Police Officer Donald Adams of Chelmsford Center:

"Daily news stories of petitions being circulated for the reinstatement of the officer and distorted issues which are far from the real story now compel me to make a statement," said Chairman Belleville, "and I have decided to give my side of the affair reluctantly."

"Special Officer Donald Adams was asked to resign from the Chelmsford police force because he made several questionable statements before the board of selectmen. In one of these statements he attacked the integrity of Fred L. Vinat, who has served as special officer and constable of Chelmsford for over 15 years. When Mr. Vinat heard of the accusation he asked Adams be brought before him. This was done and Adams denied that he had made the statement before the board of selectmen.

"After due consideration the selectmen, as I understood it, and as Adams in his statement to the press understood it, unanimously asked him to resign. Mr. Rigby, secretary of the board, wrote out a form of resignation, and Officer Adams was called in and asked to resign for the good of the police department. He said at the time that he did not care to sign but would write out his own resignation and send it in. After waiting for several days the selectmen, by a majority vote, voted to remove him.

"As to that West Chelmsford raid which also seems to be the cause for a good deal of concern: "Here are the facts," Officer Adams told me they were going to raid the Reck place in West Chelmsford and I asked him when, and he told me that he was waiting for Federal Officer Sullivan and that Sullivan would set the time. He told Adams to tell Sullivan that I wanted to see him before he made the raid and consequently on Thursday or Friday night before the raid Federal Officer Sullivan, accompanied by other officers, came to the Reck place in West Chelmsford and I was called in to see him. I was given a copy of the report of the raid and I am sure we were all pleased with the results.

"Different members of the board of selectmen have received anonymous letters and anonymous telephone messages calling them vile names. To these people I would say that while I am in office no king of hooligans will run riot in this town even if it takes a force of plain-clothes men or a detachment of state troops to round them up.

"In conclusion, I wish to say that as far as I go as a member of the board of selectmen, I would gladly grant Adams a public hearing, as I have several questions that I would like to ask him."

FUNERALS

WOOD—The body of Miss Emma A. Wood, who died at the Lowell General Hospital on Thursday, aged 75 years, was interred at 27 days, was yesterday morning at 9 o'clock by Undertaker John W. Wolbeck Son.

DYER—The funeral of David J. Dyer took place this morning from the funeral parlors of Undertakers O'Connell & Fay at 8 o'clock. The funeral service proceeded to St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock. The choir, under the direction of Mr. Morris, sang. The organist, Mr. F. J. Clegg, played. The Mass was largely attended. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. James J. Supple, D.D. The choir, under the direction of Miss Sarah Murray, the organist, sang the Gregorian chant, solo being sung by Mrs. James Morris and Misses Frances, Florence and Florence Crofty. There was a profusion of beautiful floral offerings and sprays and bouquets to testify the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The bearers were Messrs. Stephen Doyle, William Dyer, Dennis Dyer, Thomas Dyer, Luke Riley and William Holland. Burial was in the family lot in St. Patrick's cemetery, where the committal prayers were read at the grave by Rev. Dr. Supple. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertakers O'Connell & Fay.

HUBNER—The funeral of Gilbert Hubner, son of Ernest and Yvonne Hubner, died yesterday afternoon from the home of his parents, 200 Cheever street. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, under the direction of Funeral Director Joseph Albert.

MERRILL—Funeral services for Charles S. Merrill were held at his home, 192 Hastings street, yesterday afternoon. Rev. Roynton Merrill, pastor of the old South church of Boston, assisted by Rev. Richard Peters, pastor of the Highland Congregational church, officiated. Miss Rita Thompson sang appropriate selections. The choir, under the direction of Mr. George Smith, was numerous. The delegates from the Hildreth family, Mr. Munton, Charles Blazell, William Zimmer, H. R. Livingston and E. D. Livingston. The bearers were Dana Merrill, Everett Merrill, Warren Merrill, Chester Merrill, Otto Merrill and Frank Merrill. Burial was in the family lot in the Edson cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Merrill read the committal prayers. Arrangements were in the charge of Undertaker Hiram C. Brown.

COMMUNICATIONS

Patrolman Flanagan sends in the following communication relative to an issue raised in the municipal campaign:

Editor Sun:—I do not know the value of armament holdings, but I do know that there were 142 regular patrolmen last year, and they had in property valued at $213,529, an entity of $103,400. Some of these men have been policemen thirty or forty years.

Figure it out and show us that they are not fortunate if you can. It is not shown how much of this property was acquired from taxes or by a very small investment. I have been through a score of years or more. If one officer speculated in real estate during a period of 20 or 30 years, he might easily accumulate the entire amount mentioned above, while the duties and responsibilities of police officers have been doubled, their wages have remained the same, whereas the police of about thirty other cities in the state have been granted increases of a dollar a day or more.

Respectfully yours,
EDWARD F. FLANAGAN.

MASS NOTICE

OWYER—There will be a month's repose mass celebrated at St. Patrick's church, Tuesday morning at 7.45 for the repose of the soul of Mrs. Katherine Dwyer.

STAGE IS ALL SET FOR ARMISTICE BALL

At 11 p. m. on the night of the ball, there will be an impressive feature ceremony in honor of departed members of Post 87, with "Taps" closing the remembrance ritual.

Final plans have been completed for the Armistice military ball, to be conducted by members of Lowell post 87, American Legion, in Memorial Auditorium, next Tuesday evening. The chief aide will be Capt. Donald R. MacIntyre, D. S. C.

Legion members expect that the coming ball will eclipse in public interest, attendance and patriotic enthusiasm all previous celebrations of Armistice day held in Lowell. The active committee of World war veterans is finding splendid co-operation in the ranks of Battery B, 102nd Field Artillery; the 182nd Machine Gun company, M. N. C.; details of men from one organization being prepared to assist the Legion in carrying out its patriotic program in the Auditorium on Armistice night.

It is announced that Manager Ben Pickett of Keith's theatre, will furnish a spotlight and operator for the electrical effects needed for the dances to be given by the Braggs' Sisters and members of their Boston studio.

Confidence Growing in Cotton Textile Markets

Letters admit that cotton speculators and goods buyers are kept in a condition of uncertainty almost continuously, hesitating on the verge of giving large orders and fearing to take advantage of any quotations that often change in a night to new highs or lows.

A New York textile news writer informs us that one of the keenest analysts in the markets today, who is at the head of a large group of New England and southern properties (the New England Southern mill), is convinced that the foundation for a strong movement in goods has been laid.

It claims the retailers began to clean house two years ago by urging the wide adoption of a hand-to-mouth buying policy until stocks were brought to a favorable condition. The recent financial reports of textile mills in general disclosed unexpectedly low stocks of many standard fabrics, as well as losses indicative of the lack of profit in prices that have been current this year.

The Merrimack Manufacturing company, with mills in Lowell and Haverhill, also presented this important statement. It acknowledged many months ago, and the same thing was emphasized by other local concerns unable to do business at a profit. This situation is clearing today, but prospects are not bright enough to make any local mill agent make any predictions, even now, with sections of the industry running a little more evenly and production slowly on the upgrade.

Glovers' Lower
The lowering of the price of ginghams by the Amoekang company this week means that manufacturers of the same cloth will have to follow suit on their particular lines, or curtail production even further. The market in ginghams was almost flourishing early in the fall, but during the past three weeks, orders are not coming in as desired, unless suddenly, keeping buyers from speculating at today's quotations. The lack of orders has caused the Amoekang to make radical slashes in fresh goods, of from 2 to 34 cents a yard, hoping to attract badly needed orders for winter production runs.

American Hide & Leather company's latest move in readjusting its financial affairs, came yesterday with an announcement from the Boston office, stating that it is probable that full dividends will be paid on new 3 per cent. preference stock to the corporation, immediately on its issuance, if stockholders approve recapitalization plans submitted to them according to present plans. Annual requirements on the 35,000 shares to be created, will be $280,000, compared with earnings in the first nine months of this year of $337,000 and with expected net of $300,000 for the last quarter. Preferred stockholders will be given the first chance to secure the new stock.

THE GORGEOUS GIRL

Cynthia Gray Gives Away a Few of Milady's Dearest Secrets

BY CYNTHIA GREY

Hardly anyone but me knows that Catharine will be 36 her next birthday. You'd guess her age at about 25. She's as slim as a silver birch tree, and there isn't a line in her face. I never have seen a prettier girl who is any prettier than Catharine when she's dressed for a party. And her clothes are wonderful.

So I was not prepared for the shock. I had about a month ago when I stopped in at her house on my way downtown. George, her husband, was just leaving. He looked gloomier than usual.

Her door was open and I went in. Catharine was sitting up in her lacquered bed, having her coffee. But I hardly recognized her.

Her head was tied up in a white cloth, there was a rubber strap under her chin, and her face and neck were smeared with a sort of gray plaster. She was wearing a large pair of white cotton gloves.

"My word, what's happened to you?" I asked. "Automobile wreck?"

"Nothing," she said. "But don't make me laugh or the mud will crack. Sit down and have some coffee, and I'll tell you all about it."

"Mud?" I repeated. "Mud?"

"Don't pretend you haven't heard of a mud-pack, for the face," Catharine said. "You know it's supposed to remove lines and wrinkles. The rubber under my chin is only a strap I wear at night to keep from having a double chin, and the cloth tied around my head is just to hold the water-wave coots in."

"Why the gloves?" I asked. I simply had to know.

"Just to keep the cold-cream on my hands from smelling the coverlet," Catharine explained.

I went over to the dressing-table. Beside the cream was a smaller box labeled "Nose Cream" and a bottle of "Muscle Oil". There was a large white tray filled with rouge and lipstick and long eye-brow pencils. There were five bottles of French perfume, and a great jar of hair pomade.

"What does Jack think of all this?" I couldn't help saying.

"Oh, he's used to it now," Catharine said lightly. "When we were first married, he couldn't bear to see me with cold cream on my face even. But I just told him I was going to keep all who attend. The ticket machine has already sold a large number of tickets and indications point to a record attendance at Wednesday evening's affair.

"How can he kiss you good-bye through that mud-pack?" I went on.

"Oh, he doesn't any more, anyway.

I hardly see him in the morning. You know yourself, how matter-of-fact married people are."

But I know that not all of them are matter-of-fact. And that if they are, something's wrong. And it's easy to see that Catharine has fallen as a wife because she doesn't care how she looks when her husband's around as long as the rest of the world thinks she's beautiful and young.

THE UNTIDY HOUSE

Can Never Be a Home, Is What Cynthia Gray Thinks About It

BY CYNTHIA GREY

I went over to my neighbor's, Margie Forbes, the other morning, to get my cookie-cutter that she'd borrowed. Margie was sitting at the dining-room table, still in her kimono and bedroom slippers, although it was 10 o'clock.

The table was littered with coffee cups, crumpled napkins and the library book that Margie had been reading. "I don't know what I'm sitting here for, when I've got a million dishes to wash," she said. "All those and the ones from last night's dinner, besides. But really I'm so blue that I just haven't enough pep to hudge."

Then I saw that she had been crying.

"Fred was in one of his mean moods this morning," she went on.

"Men are always grumpy in the morning," I comforted her.

"That's no excuse for them," Margie said briskly. "I'm grumpy, too, but that doesn't give me an excuse not to get up and cheerfully get breakfast without even taking the time to bathe and dress myself."

This was something new to me. I had never heard of a woman getting breakfast in anything but a house-dress or bungalow apron before. They belong to the same class of clothes that a chef's white cap does.

"Jim should have married one of these poison-neck women," Margie said slowly. "He has a fit if I leave the dinner dishes until the next morning."

"But we'd never get to a movie if I had to do all that work."

The house certainly did not look very comfortable. The rugs were wrinkled up, and the chairs were dimy. Even the ferns in their sleeker basket seem drooping and sleepy.

Margie led me into the kitchen to find the cookie-cutter. She found it in the lower oven of her gas range. It was quite rusty.

"This house is so damp that everything in it rusts," Margie explained.

I went out through the back door toward my own house.

The Forbes have the prettiest lawn of anyone on our street. The vegetable garden, where Fred Forbes works till dark every summer night, is in tidy as a checkerboard.

And now I know why he keeps it that way. It's because it's the one and only thing in his home life that's clean and neat as it should be. It's his refuge—from Margie and Margie's house.

Long or Short Hair?

FIVE MINUTES MAKE THIS CHANGE

BY MARIAN HALE
N.E.A. Service Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Two heads are better than one—particularly if one head has long hair and the other short.

For a while it did look as if there might be some necessity for taking a stand on this hair question, and come out definitely for or against the bob.

Latest importations from Paris in the way of evening and afternoon gowns do seem to be against the bob. Their dignified lines and gorgeous fabrics demand a formal culture.

And sports clothes and morning frocks continue to demand the youthful bobbed hair.

There were indications of a dead lock until the hair merchants saw a golden opportunity for service. They are going in seriously for transformations that really transform.

Now a woman may bobbed in the morning and flaunt a Grecian bun, a psyche, a mess of coils or any form of coiffure she likes in the evening.

Armand Blatt, one of the leading creators of hair styles in New York, says: "Undoubtedly great many women will bow to Paris and let their hair grow, but the really clever woman will manage to sacrifice neither style nor comfort."

The time limit on transformations is said to be one minute—less time than most long-haired women take to whip off their locks.

When a man asks a woman to marry him, this is what he's really saying to her:

"Will you love me always, and mend my clothes, and have my meals on time, and bring up my children, and live within my income, and be cheerful through it all?"

The girl who knows how to run her house right from the start has twice the chance of having a happy one than the girl who is just learning.

For example, there's the problem of entertaining. It doesn't cost much to make a bowl of salad, some rolls and coffee and have a few friends in for Sunday night supper. And a dozen such evenings will add more color and fun to life.

For a group of friends in common is one of the strongest ties married people have. No matter how much to love with each other a man and his wife are, there's something lacking in their lives if they don't know other couples to visit occasionally.

For all of us are grown-up children, more or less, and the most serious-minded man in the world needs to relax and forget his cares in an evening of one-stepping or mah-jongging now and then.

Home-making in its best sense isn't drudgery, but art. It takes the eye of an artist to know that an orange-colored cushion and a bowl of yellow nasturtiums would brighten up the gloomy corner of the house. And then if you can go ahead and make the cushion and grow the nasturtiums in window-box, you're not only an artist but an economist besides.

There's undoubtedly a lot for a girl to learn if she is going to keep her home the place of

53,000 OUT TO SEE HARVARD-PRINCETON GAME AT CAMBRIDGE

First of East's Outstanding Gridiron Clashes Takes Place This Afternoon, When Crimson Grapples With

Tigers in Opening Test of "Big Three Supremacy"

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (by the Associated Press)—The calm before the final storm of the year is the football season, which will come today on eastern gridirons where Princeton and Harvard, and Lafayette and Rutgers meet in the two most important contests of a spotted program.

The Tiger-Crimson clash at Cambridge will inaugurate the "big three" series. Rutgers, one of the six unbeaten eleven of the east, is figured to lose to Lafayette, which defeated Pitt and W. & J. and outrushed Penn-Alumni although losing to the latter last week.

Large another unbeaten eleven, will be tested by oil Cross, Penn State and Carnegie Tech will connect at State college with the Nittany Lion a slight favorite over the Tartans who, however, were good enough to beat from Pitt and Penn State in the Sun.

Referee, W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore; Umpire, F. W. Murphy, Brown; Head Linesman, W. M. Hollenbeck, Pennsylvania; Field Judge, W. R. Olson, Lehigh.

Lafayette, with a squad undoubtedly one of the most powerful in the east, will be faced with the task of outscoring a smart trio of Rutgers' backs including Benker, leading scorer of the year, and Terrell, an elusive runner in the open field. The game will be played at Princeton stadium because of an unusual demand for tickets.

Other prominent eleven of the western section will face opponents not calculated to disturb their position. Yale will play substitutes against Princeton in its first rest up for the Princeton and Harvard games on the next two Saturdays. Pennsylvania, the lone team in the east neither beaten, but Dave Campbell, former All-American star and Harvard end coach, believes he is a natural wingman. Much unbeatent but by Pitt will clash with West Virginia, West Virginia, one of the cornerstones of the Navy.

Harvard will enter the game a strong favorite over Princeton, whose hopes for victory will be placed almost entirely upon the past performances of Tiger teams which have played their best games of the season against Harvard.

Cambridge, Nov. 8.—The ice wagon school of gridiron preparation, which figured in the moulding of the career of "Red" Grange, famous Illinois back, was having its annual Graduate bonspiel, Saturday, at the Benet Gymnasium, Harvard sophomore, stars against Princeton in its first big game at end.

Gumacho, whose home is in Leominster, Mass., put himself into shape for this season's campaign by lifting chunks of ice during the summer. Most of Gumacho's previous gridiron activity has been at centre or tackle, but Dave Campbell, former All-American star and Harvard end coach, believes he is a natural wingman. Much unbeatent but by Pitt will clash with West Virginia, West Virginia, one of the cornerstones of the Navy.

Yale vs. Maryland

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—Preparatory to the two "big three" games come the Yale varsity football team and its opponent today the smarts University of Maryland team.

At the Yale Bowl, Maryland gave the Yale bulldogs the greatest scare of the season last year when it scored two touchdowns in the first few minutes of play and led the Blue eleven until toward the end of the game when Yale nosed out a victory.

Yale will enter the game with several of its first string men out of the battle. Captain Loveloy, for the first time this year, will be among the missing and his place will be filled by Burt. Injuries will keep two other players on the bench—Sibley, Sibley, left end, and Eddie Conley, left halfback, and Dan Allen, fullback, also will be on the side lines when the referee's whistle blows.

The Maryland squad, after a fast signal drill and kicking practice in the bowl yesterday, was reported to be in good condition. Maryland is not as strong offensively or defensively as it was a year ago, largely because of the graduation of McQuade, Groves and Pelleck, but Curley Byrd, Maryland mentor, wears a mask of optimism, silent and significant.

It is Yale's third intersectional game of the season, having scored victories over North Carolina and Georgia. The probable lineups:

Harvard will have a strong advantage in kicking, as it has won the more frequent field attack, but Princeton counts upon her veteran line to check the Crimson's drive. Both teams have undergone important shifts since their last important battles, Harvard having several line changes while the Tigers had all experiments with their "light weight" backfield.

Princeton, though it has been drilled to versatility on attack, is expected to rely more upon old-fashioned grunting methods than Princeton, who has shown little driving line in previous games and will depend on the added route for scoring efforts. ## TRIAL OF CHAS. PONZI

Accountant Testifies $9,582,
591 Taken in Get Rich Quick Scheme

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—Charles Ponzi took in $9,582,591 from investors in his quick-rich scheme, but instead of the 50 per cent profits promised them, made a profit of only $45, according to entries on his books, Ralph J. Longdon, an accountant, testified today at the trial of Ponzi in the superior court on indictments charging him with larceny. Ponzi paid out in cash $9,337,150, he said. A sum of $480,000 drawn against Ponzi's account could not be accounted for. There was no trace of any dealings in international postal reply coupons, as represented by Ponzi, and the only profit was on dividends on telephone stock, the accountant testified.

PHILIPPINES HERALD COMMENTS ON ELECTION

MANILA, Nov. 7 (By the Associated Press)—The Philippines Herald, owned and edited by Filipinos, comments on the election in the United States as follows:

"The victory of Coolidge has in one respect given a certain definiteness to the Philippine problem. Under his administration the independence of the Philippines is a remote possibility, with him in the White House ready with his veto power to kill any legislation granting the Islands their freedom. It is therefore for Filipinos to realize the limitations of their political opportunities during the next four years and to address themselves to tasks that are of more immediate advantage to the country."

JIM LUCEY'S FRIENDS TO ASK RECOUNT

NORTHAMPTON, November 7.—With the expressed disapproval of James Lucy, shoemaker friend of President Coolidge and loser in the Lucy-O'Dea representative contest of Tuesday, and with the hearty approval of James H. O'Dea, the winner, friends of Mr. Lucy today prepared to ask for a recount of the vote. On the face of the returns Mr. O'Dea defeated Mr. Lucy by 182 votes but friends of the shoemaker expressed the belief that errors have occurred in the count in one ward. Mr. Lucy in appealing the recount said that not only was he not dissatisfied with the outcome, but he was surprised at the strength of the support given to him.

ROBBERS IN CONTROL OF TWO CITY LABORERS OVERCOME IN LAWRENCE LIQUOR WAREHOUSE

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Four robbers, believed to have been in search of liquor, today remained in possession of the Wake and McLaughlin warehouses and kept two workmen prisoners for nearly an hour. One, probably fatally injured, passed away and died with a large quantity of merchandise. The bullet left behind about $10,000 worth of radio apparatus which they had melted in boxes.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 7.—Two men were overcome and several others were endangered this noon when city laborers, dynamiting for a sewer in South Broadway, burst an eight-inch gas main. Martin A. McLaughlin, an employee of the gas company, at once telephoned to Humphrey Terry, compiler to repair the damaged main and was the ones overcome. It was necessary to shut the gas off.

WILL BUTLER HELP THE MILLS?

President Coolidge's sweeping victory has turned the attention of the nation to William M. Butler, the campaign manager who assumed command of the situation early in the year and dictated practically every move and every step taken by the party leaders, its candidates and even its national convention. True, it is, of course, that President Coolidge was frequently consulted and that he acted as a sort of censor upon the utterances of some of the very campaigners such as General Dawes, Secretary Wilson and a few others, but in all else Mr. Butler was the general in charge of the republican forces. His role in the campaign just closed might be compared to that of Mark Hanna in the McKinley campaign of 1896. Mr. Hanna said he would furnish the candidate if the corporations would furnish the funds, and this they did to an extent unparalleled in the history of the country—$16,000,000 it was estimated. For this generosity they were privileged to write the tariff schedules they wanted and these became part of the new tariff law. Then followed the era of the big trusts which it took nearly twenty years to bring under the control of law. We do not believe Mr. Butler made such promises to the big contributors to the republican campaign chest; but they will be remembered in the good republican times ahead.

But what of Mr. Butler? What will be his reward? Already he is mentioned as a prospective candidate for Senator Lodge's place, as the sage of Nahant, we regret to say, is now critically ill. Mr. Butler has been but little known in politics, his principal business being that of cotton manufacturer in New Bedford. At first he was mentioned as candidate for the senate against Senator Walsh; but having taken charge of President Coolidge's campaign, the nomination was offered Governor Cox who declined, and then it went to Gillett. In case of a sudden vacancy for United States senator, the governor can make a temporary appointment pending the election of an incumbent at a regular or special election. In such an emergency, Butler would undoubtedly be the choice of the governor. If a special election were held Senator Walsh might be a candidate, and again he might not, as the Coolidge drive for Butler would be overpowering.

Butler is a prominent mill man. Is it too much to expect that he will set the government machinery in motion to overcome the depression that has settled upon the textile industries of New England? With a great pull upon congress and every department of the government, he should be able to do something toward making good those republican slogans used during the campaign regarding the "full dinner pail," "an end of unemployment" and a "speedy return of prosperity." All these phrases were frequently used by the republican spellbinders and now the time has arrived at which, as young Col. Roosevelt would put it, the G. O. P. is expected "to deliver the goods," or stand discredited on its campaign promises. Which will it be? Time will tell.

COOLIDGE AND CONGRESS

President Coolidge has won a great personal victory and it now appears that he will have a solid republican majority to back him up in both branches of congress. It is always better that the executive and legislative departments of the government are under the control of the same party in order that deadlocks may be avoided and that the work of the administration may not be retarded through political bickerings. The present congress is so divided between the two major parties and the republican insurgents that no party can claim control. Such a condition in England would precipitate a general election, but here we have a different system and have to fight it out as best we can through coalition and compromise. The indications at present point to a republican majority with, however, a remnant of the La Follette insurgency which can work only for obstructiveness in the interests not of the people but of sociopolitical radicalism.

SOME DEMOCRATIC HOODOOS

Over the political rains for which he and his brother have been largely responsible, William Jennings Bryan comes out as usual to tell the democrats what they must do to appear in the light four years hence, presumably under his guidance and tutelage.

It is high time the democratic party ceased to accept any dictation from Mr. Bryan or his brother in Nebraska. He made the people of his own state so sick of him that he had to move south in order to be even mentioned in the councils of the party he presumed to lead; and now he continues to dictate and to pose as the national mentor of the party in whose temporary rut he has been a prominent factor.

Another supposed leader who figured in the last democratic convention is William G. McAdoo. He, too, made the people of his own state so sick of him that he has to move south in order to be even mentioned in the councils of the party he presumes to lead; and now he continues to dictate and to pose as the national mentor of the party in whose temporary rut he has been a prominent factor.

Mr. Gompers' MISTAKE

It was with a considerable dash and an air of great political power that the leaders of the American Federation of Labor endorsed La Follette when he announced that he would run as an independent candidate for the presidency. It was not expected that President Gompers could be budged into such a new departure; but he has evidently reached a stage at which his ability to dictate and enforce his policies has undergone a serious decline. He was always the avowed enemy of socialism, and in this respect he won the confidence of the people throughout the country.

But in endorsing La Follette, we feel that he made a grievous mistake which reflected upon the organization of which he is the head, and arrayed it against the two major parties to one or other of which the A. F. of L. must appeal for labor reforms. It is evident that Mr. Gompers and the other labor leaders cannot now appeal to the party in power for needed reforms with much confidence of sympathetic consideration as if they had remained neutral in the contest. It is true, that the rank and file of the organization did not follow the dictation of the head officials, but that will not be considered now.

The old A. F. of L. policy of neutrality as between the political parties is much the best, a fact that is quite obvious from the result of the recent campaign. It cannot be a comfortable reflection for the A. F. of L. to feel that the organization has been dragged down with La Follette in ignominious defeat. We do not see that La Follette can ever compensate the A. F. of L. for such a sacrifice.

TO ABOLISH JOHN BULL

England is arguing whether or not she should do away with John Bull, the fat gentleman with the square-top plug hat. For about 200 years John Bull has been the symbol of England in song, story and cartoon. The English now wonder if John isn't too old-fashioned and no longer representative of their country.

This starts us thinking: Does Uncle Sam, as pictured in cartoons and at parades, still symbolize America? Would it be more appropriate to give him a new suit of clothes? Here is a chance for the cartoonists.

If an attempt is made to bring Uncle Sam up to date, a barber's first suggestion would be to shave off the venerable gentleman's chin whiskers. It has always been a source of worry to us, that these would sooner or later get caught in the machinery.

Time was, when chin whiskers were in style. So were Sam's trousers that button with a strap under the instep of his heavy boots. So was his fork-tailed coat.

Uncle Sam was pictured to represent a conservative, level-headed, shroud old Yankee farmer—chewing a straw while he made wise cracks. And he looked the part—back yonder in the long ago.

It would be impossible for the cartoonists to create a figure that would symbolize modern America, the average American or even the American government.

There could be no agreement. Time is developing many factions and disrespected entities.

We urge the English to leave well enough alone, to retain John Bull as their symbol. And it is best to keep Uncle Sam as he is, although his reign is not so modern as that of John Bull. However, there would be no harm in shaving off those chin whiskers, if for no other reason than to see what he looks like underneath. As for trying a dress suit on him, or golfing jackets or sweater sport clothes—well, that is up to the cartoonists.

The figure of Uncle Sam has become legendary. He stands out as one of the early heroic characters that will be plentiful in the old age of our civilization. Uncle Sam is firmly established in folk lore, even though Vulcan or Ajax might be more appropriate symbols of national America.

THE DIVORCE EVIL

Throughout the country in 1923, there were 1,223,828 marriages and 165,139 divorces, which is 13.6 per cent. In Massachusetts there were 35,200 marriages and 3,881. An increase of 355 over the year 1922. In this state there was one divorce for every ten marriages. The only state in the Union which divorces are outlawed is Maryland, which repealed all laws permitting divorce in 1878. The states that have the highest percentage of divorces are Texas, with 14.64, and Illinois, with 13.306. The percentage in the former is 21 and in the latter 14.5. The marriage tie is evidently of slight binding force in Illinois and still less so in Texas.

RESISTING POWER

No use getting scared because tuberculosis of the lungs has killed possibly 30 million people in the last 43 years. Skilled medical specialists will tell you, autopsies show that four out of every five have T. B. at some time or other in life, usually in very mild form. They are attacked—but conquer the invader or hold it in check.

The danger isn't so much in germs as in the body's powers of resistance being broken down so it cannot fight germs. Fright and too much worry about self are often as deadly as germs and low bodily resistance combined.

PASSPORTS

American Bankers' association urges Uncle Sam to negotiate with foreign governments to eliminate the passport system. Then you could travel freely from one country to another, but it will never be done.

The passport in Europe is more a protection than a tourist device. We must profit by the German system, making every new arrival in a town report to police headquarters within 24 hours to get his papers in order. Fugitives would be more readily traced, even in a large country.

THE FARMER'S DOLLAR

The department of agriculture shows that the purchasing power of farm products is now only a tenth less than it was in 1913. Even if it balanced that tenth it would not make the farmer as prosperous as he was before the war, for the reason that he has run in debt during the past few years, and he has to pay interest on an inflated investment. In addition to this, the standard of living even for the farmer is much higher than it was in pre-war days.

AIR FLIVVERS

Henry Ford is quoted as saying that small airplanes can be built cheaper than Ford autos. It would depend on the size of the market—quantity production.

One advantage of using flying machines instead of motorcars is that we would get away from the terrible tax burden of road buildings and frequent resurfacing. It might be, however, that the farmer is much the undertaker would be a little larger.

Strake V. Claggett will have to change his first name if he wants to get elected. To the voters who elected Auditor Cook his first name has a very obnoxious foreign sound, although Mr. Claggett claims his ancestors came over on the Mayflower.

In spite of all opposition, Alonso B. Cook is re-elected auditor. By what sort of legal maneuver did he hold his place year after year in the face of such opposition, based upon his well known inefficiency, neglect of duty and wilful violation of the civil service law?

La Follette came to Boston and in his speech there made an appeal for support of Senator Walsh. That endorsement was undoubtedly a strong factor in the defeat of the senator.

Ma Ferguson wins out as candidate for governor in Texas and thus she claims to have vindicated her husband who was ousted from the office. He can now give orders from behind the scenes.

Recently five auto thefts in New York were traced to Holland where they were sold. Thus the fine art of auto stealing is taking on an international aspect.

Next Tuesday the election officials will have another all night job. It might be well for some of them to sleep all day Monday to be prepared for the ordeal.

The people of the state voted in favor of better enforcement of the liquor law, and thereby an improvement is much needed.

This starts us thinking: Does Uncle Sam, as pictured in cartoons and at parades, still symbolize America?

It is the harvest time of the printing offices that turn out those election cards and posters.

Everybody will rejoice to hear that Senator Lodge shows signs of recovery.

SEEN AND HEARD

Campaign speeches over the radio have boosted movie attendance even more than salesmen's pictures.

Jim Gets Raise

"My husband is so good to his employees." "Is he?" "Yes. He came home last night all tired out, poor fellow, and I heard him murmur in his sleep, 'Jim, I'll raise you 10.' And business is so dull, too."—Store Lore.

Counted Them

Little White was wearing his first pair of pants for the first time. As he sat in his father's law office another lawyer dropped in. The two lawyers talked away together, but not a word about the new pants was said. White stood this as long as he could. Then he said, "In a careless and indifferent way, 'There's three pairs of pants in this room.'"—Minneapolis Tribune.

Beagle Fazed Him

The dear old gentleman was fond of children. But he shook his head after he had met 'the up-to-date' Beagle Jones, aged 7. Said the old gentleman to Ruggie: "And whose little boy is this, I wonder?" "There are two ways you can find out," replied the Little boy. "And what are these my child?" You might guess or you might inquire," replied Beagle in a bored tone.

A Laugh a Day

Everybody is interested in the doings of kid days. You were a kid once yourself—and maybe now you have some little folks of your own. "Freckles and His Friends," by C. M. Blosser, is a comic that appeals to young and old alike. It recalls to grownups their younger days and its pictures, for little folks, the every day life of events they themselves are living. Freckles himself is just an all-around American boy, the star of this real kid comic. Read about "Freckles and His Friends" every day in The Sun.

Basketry Expert

A young woman recently received instruction in the art of Indian basketry and had made several copies of Indian baskets of which she was very proud. A friend, who had been living in Arizona, called upon the young woman, who showed the baskets with considerable pride. "They are really very well done," commented the visitor, "but, of course, they are not the real Indian baskets." "Why, Mrs. Johnson," indignantly exclaimed the maker, "how can you say that when I just told you that I made them myself?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Thinking It Over

A man once arrived at a seashore resort and was shown to a room at a hotel. Shortly afterward a friend stopped on him and found him sitting gloomily surveying a trunk that stood against the wall. "What's the matter?" asked the elder. "I want to get out of this city or to that trunk," was the answer. "Well, what's the difficulty—lost the key?" "No, I have the key all right," he said, breathing a sigh. "I'll tell you how it is. My wife packed that trunk. She expected to come with me, but was prevented. To my certain knowledge she put in enough to fill three trunks the way it would open. I would have to open it, the others will hold up all the room. I could never get them back. Now I'm wondering whether it would be cheaper to go and buy a new suit of clothes or two more trunks."

To a Bouquet

Ye lovely gems of innocence! The objects of my constant care. From each distractingly thought I turn, To see you blooming fresh and fair. What tho' the piercing wintry blast, Falls like a dirge upon my soul, And the wild tempest loudly roars— Sweet flowers, it cannot reach you here.

What do I see?—your lovely forms Now languish!—must ye, then, decay? Ye pine! for spring's refreshing showers, And for the sun's more genial ray.

Then fare ye well!—your scents leaves, I'll bathe with tears of fond regret; I loved ye when you looked so fair!

Thus, when some dear one, from our side, Is torn by death's cold hand away, We mourn the cherished treasure gone, And weeping, kiss the lifeless clay.

O'er the bright joys forever crushed, Will memory brood with fond regret? We loved her when like us she smiled And tho' no more, we love her yet!

—FRANCES JANE CROSBY.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Whether his team wins or loses today in Haverhill, Coach "Jimmy" Liston of the high school football team deserves a great deal of praise for the work he has done this year in making football one of the biggest sports on the school calendar. With the assistance of Jim Coach Pierotti, he has maneuvered out of raw material the team that has won praise from everyone for its high clean playing. Only once has the team been accused of playing roughly.

And that was against Manchester, at the ninth, as the case may be—has been beaten by the society athlete, who counts the day lost when he doesn't have to climb up a telephone pole to bring down a tally or a Tom that failed to map out his trail toward the skylight so it could make the return trip with a slip or a tumble. Thursday night, the Humane society received a hasty call from a well known resident of Rogers street, "Fuzzy" had been missing—the pet cat of the house kitchen—and its owner finally located it mewling in fright, crouched atop the house ridgepole. Assistant Baker shovelled the Ford across lots to get to the rescue. He was growing dark. Begging "Fuzzy" to move down as far as the gutters did no good. Baker resolved to climb the roof somehow. The sun went down just as he spied a convenient skylight on the west side of the house. He took the inside stairways to the attic, managed to open the skylight and climb outside without slipping on the dry, smooth roof, and finally crept to the ridgepole, fought with "Fuzzy," who didn't seem glad, and finally got back to terra firma, put "Fuzzy" in his owner's arms and casually jotted down in his well filled notebook: "Mut No. 51 saved from the gas house."

Recently five auto thefts in New York were traced to Holland where they were sold. Thus the fine art of auto stealing is taking on an international aspect.

Next Tuesday the election officials will have another all night job. It might be well for some of them to sleep all day Monday to be prepared for the ordeal.

Hon. George F. Williams who will be remembered by some of the older residents as a political speaker and once a candidate for governor, spoke here 26 years ago in support of Robert W. ## How This Woman Got Strength

Put Up 300 Quarts Fruit, 500 Glasses Jelly and Took Care of Four Children

Norwalk, Iowa.—"I have been meaning for some time to write and tell you how much good your medicine has done me. When I started to take it I was almost bed fast and would have been in bed all the time if I had had any one to care for my children. There was so much swelling and pain that I could hardly take a step. I took seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and found that so healing. I am not entirely well yet for I was in bad shape when I started your medicine, but I am so much better that I am not afraid to recommend it, and I think if I keep on taking it, it will cure me. I have done my work all along this summer, caring for four children, and I canned 300 quarts of fruit and made 500 glasses of jelly, so you see I must be better. I feel pretty good all the time and I am glad to tell others about the medicine." —Mrs. C. J. WENNERMARK, Box 141, Norwalk, Iowa.

EXPLAINING THE LIQUOR LAW AMENDMENT

Just what results will accrue from the acceptance by the voters at last Tuesday's elections of the so-called liquor law amendment and in what manner its acceptance will affect the enforcement of prohibition in the commonwealth, are questions being quite generally asked in Lowell.

In the first place, this act already has been passed by the state legislature and signed by the governor, so that only acceptance by the electorate will be necessary for it to become operative. It will not actually become operative, however, until 30 days after the certification of the vote by the secretary of state.

Under the existing state laws relative to the enforcement of prohibition, it is a crime only to sell liquor or beer with a percentage content above the prescribed amount or to keep it with intent to sell. It is not a crime to manufacture it, possess it, or transport it. Under the Volstead act, the provisions of which have been enforced by federal officials, manufacture, possession, transportation and sale all are criminal and now with the acceptance of the amendment, manufacture, possession and transportation become crimes under the state prohibition law as well as under the federal law. This will allow state officers, such as members of the Lowell police department, to enforce and prosecute upon the same grounds as federal agents.

For example: Under the state law before the acceptance of the amendment, a person might transport through Merrimack street in a vehicle a dozen cases of liquor and could not be a criminal act under the state law. It would be under the federal law and federal agents would have the power to prosecute on a charge of illegal transportation, but the person engaged in the transportation would be beyond the jurisdiction of local liquor law officers.

Another example might be the possession in a home or place of business of a quantity of liquor. State officers could not molest the owner unless there was proof the liquor was being stored there with an intent to dispose of it by sale, while under the federal law, the mere fact of it being stored there is grounds for arrest.

BOY INJURED BY DYNAMITE CAP

Frederick Scott, 7 years of age, was the victim of a dynamite cap explosion in the Dracut second grade school room, yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock. The boy was taken to Lowell Corporation hospital with his left hand badly bruised and torn. This morning he was reported to be resting comfortably. The hand will not have to be amputated.

The boy is a pupil of Miss Mae Gallagher. The injured children had just returned to the school after a 15-minute outdoor recess. The Scott boy exploded in his left hand a dynamite cap, it is believed. How the explosion occurred is a question, but the boy immediately afterward was found with his hand badly torn and fingers mangled.
A teacher standing near the boy's desk
when the explosion occurred, fainted from fright.

School Junior Albert H. Coburn made a quick trip to the Corporation hospital with the injured boy.

FIREMEN HOLD COSTUME PARTY

Cottington firemen held their fourth annual costume party in Hinsbury hall last evening, attendance being exceptional. Fire alarms sounding several times during the evening, took many of the firemen temporarily away from the scene of festivities. The committee in charge of the successful affair was as follows:

General manager, John McDonald;
assistant general manager, Patrick Gorman; chief aid, Jesse Richardson; chief checkers, Gerry Chaplin and James Brennan; cashier, Thomas
Mack; aids, Thomas Lennon, Thomas Garrick, Harry Peavey and Robert McNease.

ROOM WRECKED WHEN STOVE EXPLODED

An electric stove, so-called, used for heating the home of Walter Pitts-bury in Tuckbury Centre, suddenly exploded yesterday noon. The blast of expanding air smashed all the windows in the room, knocked a closed door off its hinges and badly damaged
the ceiling and walls. Mr. and Mrs.
Pittsburry were both in the room, but escaped injury. Papers were burning in the stove when the explosion occurred.

METROPOLITAN OPERA SOPRANO COMING

Mabel Garrison, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, has been engaged by the Parker fund trustees to sing at the Memorial Auditorium on the evening of Nov. 14, in place of Maria Kurenko, the Russian coloratura soprano, who has been prevented from sailing to this country from Europe because of passport complications.

Mabel Garrison is one of the favorite Metropolitan sopranos and is in every respect a principal artist. She is American-born, having been raised in Baltimore where she began her musical study at Peabody Institute.

USE CARE IN

CHECKING HOOK-UPS

N.E.A. Service Radio Editor

Hook-ups hastily connected and carelessly checked may result in the loss of much time and money.

This is the essential point in considering the matter of keeping vacuum tubes longest. Vacuum tubes are costly and delicate, and must therefore be used with extreme care and caution.

A wrong connection at an unchecked short, any one of several mistakes may result in a blown-out tube. To avoid this, the best advice for fans who make their own receivers is to check up on their circuits step by step.

The first wiring to be done in any receiver is installation of the filament leads. These wires should be run along the back if possible, and all connections with tube sockets, A-batteries and rheostats completed before any other wiring is begun.

B. VOLTAGE HEAVY

When the filament wiring is completed, a good practice is to test out the tubes in their sockets. If they light, the wiring is correct.

Battery connections should not be made until after this test is made and it proves successful. Even after the B-leads are connected, extreme caution should be used. A wire might be accidentally crossed with a filament lead, with the result that a tube could easily be blown out.

Even after checking up closely, enumeration must still be the guide. Use only one tube instead of all for which the hook-up provides, inserting it sepa-

MERCURY VAPOR TUBE

A mercury vapor tube designed by two Frenchmen is said to amplify incoming radio signals a million times. It is said to be a combination of a zincite crystal and a steel point.

PERFECT SENDER

The most nearly perfect transmission checked up by the bureau of standards is that of station WBZ at Springfield, Mass. According to the records this station has not deviated from its assigned frequency of 860 kilocycles any more than .05 of 1 percent, if even that.

THE VOICE FROM WEEI

One of the newest stations on the air is WEEI at Boston. "Bob" Emery, its program director, had scarcely introduced himself than he was known as "Big Brother" to thousands of boys and girls throughout New England. The letters he has been getting from them attest his popularity.

CITY PRIMARIES NEXT TUESDAY Continued

ence in the field of nine candidates for mayor, 30 candidates for councilor and 10 for school committee. Interest is bound to be wide-spread.

Not for several years has active street campaigning by mayoral aspirants been confined to such a restricted period of time, only one week being available for the "heavy stuff," because of national and state campaigns extending right up to last Monday night.

Beginning on Wednesday, however, under-the-star oratory began to take shape and over since municipal spell-binding has had the call over all other outdoor sports. It will be going full blast tonight, personnel and quiet work will mark the Sabbath and then it will break out again on Monday to reach a climax at a public political forum at the Memorial Auditorium at night, with upwards of 20 candidates due to speak, each for three minutes.

Ballot will be open Tuesday from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m., the usual primaries being held that have prevailed since the 12 noon to 9 p.m. schedule was discarded a few years ago.

While the ballot will not be difficult to handle, the appearance on it of 55 names of candidates, will make counting none too easy and complete returns probably will not be available until considerably after midnight. Indications as to nominees, however, should be available considerably earlier and if precinct officers carry out the instructions of the commissioners as to procedure in counting the mayoralty votes, those telephone results should not be any later than 10 p.m. In arriving at city hall.

There will be no referenda on the city ballot and in no manner will it compare with the bulky ballots of national elections.

Elections officials feel now that it will be better to have two police officers on duty at each polling booth at all times and unless plans are changed before Tuesday the police department will be asked to make such provisions in marking out assignments of patrolmen.

The list of mayoralty candidates includes Mayor John J. Donovan, who seeks renomination, and Thomas H. Braden, Thomas J. Corbett, George H. Brown, Stephen C. Garrity, Frank A. Watnoch, James J. Bruin, Samuel Scott and Thomas F. McCarthy. The six present councillors-at-large seek renomination and Thomas H. DeJane, James H. Riley and Donald M. Cameron, now serving on the school committee, ask another term.

Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 22

Both of Jack's pets seemed to sense that they were going to be left behind. Plop scampered up the elephant's trunk and hopped up on Jack's arm and hung on tight. Flip raced ahead of the elephant and barked loudly. The bear hunter, however, came down out of the tower and got them both.

With great strides the elephant soon carried Jack and the hunter out of sight of the tower. And Jack was suddenly startled when he heard a low howl. Instantly the elephant stopped short, and the hunter raised a gun to his shoulder. They were just a short distance from a tiger.

"You had better crouch down and keep out of the way," said the hunter. "When the tiger realizes that we see him, he will likely spring at the elephant." So Jack got down on his knees and peered over the side of the box. Then he shouted, "There's the tiger, in that clump of bushes." (Continued.)

AN OLD FRIEND APPEARS

White Daddy Gander took the cook back to Yum Yum Land on his magic dust-pan, something else was happening up in the sky.

A wind came along and blew away the cloud that held up the House-That-Jack-Built.

And then as the cloud was passing the highest mountain in the world, it left the house sticking on the mountain peak like a bird-house on a pine.

And the Twins were in it.

"Oh goodness!" cried Nancy. "How shall we ever get down?"

"Easy as pie," declared Nick. "What are our maple green shoes for?"

"I know," said Nancy. "But they won't do any good. We'd have to leave Jack's house up here and I'd be ashamed to go back without it. Besides we never could remember how to get back."

So they heard a laugh. "Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho!" said a voice. "What are friends for? I'd like to know! Didn't I tell you a long time ago to let me know if you needed help? That's no way to treat an old friend!"

CHANGES IN PERSONNEL OF HOUSE AND SENATE COMMITTEES

General Shakeup as Result of Tuesday's Election—Fewer Than a Dozen Changes, However, In Chairmen Will Be Necessary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—While there will be a general shakeup in the personnel of house and senate committees as a result of Tuesday's election, fewer than a dozen changes of importance in chairmen will be necessary. At least three vacancies caused by death, however, will have to be filled before the expiration of the present congress.

Death! Of Senators Colt, of Rhode Island, and Branchedge, of Connecticut, leave the chairmanship of the immigration and judiciary committees vacant, while in the house the merchant marine committee is without a chairman due to the death of Representative Greene of Massachusetts.

Senator Sterling of South Dakota is ranking republican on the senate immigration committee, but he will not be in the senate after March 4. Senator Johnson of California will then be in line for chairman. Senator Borah, of Idaho, is the ranking republican member of the judiciary committee on which Reed Smoot of Utah is the ranking republican, while Senator Moses of New Hampshire, will be in line for chairman of the postoffice committee, Representative Edmunds of Pennsylvania, who was not a candidate for re-election, is in line for chairman during the December session, with Representative Scott of Michigan next on the committee's publican roster.

Senator Bursum, of New Mexico, who has been defeated for re-election on the face of incomplete returns, is chairman of the senate pensions committee; Senator Brookhart of Iowa, and Frasor of North Dakota, who usually have lined up with the Wisconsin senator on pension issues, have committee assignments but are chairman of none, while Ladd of North Dakota, another senator identified with La Follette, now is chairman of the public lands committee.

After March 4, Senator Coolidge will be relieved of the duties of senator, pending officer and will be in position to resume chairmanship of the inter-state commerce committee. If the republican majority seems fit to displace Senator Smith, democrat of South Carolina, who has been serving in that capacity,

In the house, Representative Keller of Minnesota, a La Follette supporter, is in line for the claims committee.

PRES. COOLIDGE BUSY

Goes Forward With Plans—
Commission to Investigate Agriculture

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Coolidge went forward today with his post-election plans, the first of which was set in operation yesterday with the appointment of the commission to investigate agricultural conditions.

A conference of the commission, comprising eight representatives of farming interests drawn from practically all sections of the country, is expected to be called for the middle of this month.

Robert D. Carey of Careyhurst, Wyo., a former governor of that state, is chairman and the membership, it was indicated, may be increased.

With the appointment of this voluntary body, President Coolidge carried out one of the few proposals he advanced in accepting the nomination of the party as standard bearer. He hopes to have its legislative recommendations before him in time for action at the coming short session of congress.

Mr. Coolidge is of the opinion that present needs would not warrant the calling of a special session of the new congress before its regular meeting in December next year. Not even if it were feasible to bring up again with the present congress, which passes out of existence March 4, problems of tax reduction.

GARIBOLDI CHALLENGES VISCOUNT CECIL TO JOIN MUSSOLINI TO DUEL

ROME, Nov. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—Viscount Cecil is widely expected to join the new cabinet as chief of the Duchy of Lancaster, which is a more or less ornamental post with few administrative duties. His elevation would bring the number of cabinet members to twenty, probably combining the Minister of Posts with posts outside the cabinet remain to be filled in the new Baldwin ministry, however. Viscount Cecil, as Lord Hobart, Cecil, was lord privy seal in the last conservative administration.

It is generally agreed that there will be one woman member in the new administration and that the Duchess of Atholl will be chosen. The post she will take, according to the political correspondents, will be either that of parliamentary secretary to the board of education or one of the Scottish offices. In the late Labor government Miss Margaret Bondfield was parliamentary secretary to the ministry of labor.

There is the usual political pull over the week-end and this is likely to continue until next Tuesday. Premier Baldwin is renewing his acquaintance with Cheshire Court, the official country estate of the prime minister.

HANDSOME BUCK DEER JUMPED FROM PAWTUCKET BRIDGE

Stranger From the Woods Chased by Pack of Dogs Becomes Frenzied and Jumps to His Death in Rock-bed of Merrimack River

Frenzied by the vicious attacks of a pack of dogs driving him in swift flight through several thickly-settled clearings in the vicinity of the Lowell end of Pawtucket bridge, a handsome buck deer about two years old, blindly seeking a place of safety, started across the big bridge toward Pawtucketville, about 10:30 o'clock this morning, shied away from two approaching automobiles and then took a desperate leap over the right cement wall fence and landed on the rocks in the river bed more than 50 feet below. Death was practically instantaneous, spectators of the spectacular tragedy said.

Scores of pedestrians and motor car drivers witnessed the scene unusual, shocked by the picture of the deer making the flying leap many feet above the bridge fencing and screeing far outward over river basin as it plunged headlong downward to its death.

Police Officer Barney Judge, off duty, witnessed the animal's flight over the bridge from School street and its desperate plunge to escape the human traffic on the bridge. Lowell police headquarters was promptly notified and telephone messages to Lowell Humane Society, local game warden and dealers were also passed and instructions were given by Deputy E. H. Houghton to remove the body of the frightened deer and the desparate gallop away over the bridgeway on the last trail.

In the meantime, State Police Officer Barney Judge, off duty, witnessed the scene unusual, shocked by the picture of the deer making the flying leap many feet above the bridge fencing and screeing far outward over river basin as it plunged headlong downward to its death.

This morning, the police say, the same deer was chased for more than an hour by boys, accompanied by a number of dogs of all breeds, the buck appearing on the Lowell side of the river and apparently having crossed Pawtucket bridge or swam the Merrimack river above the bridge, during the night. Hundreds of citizens in the neighborhood of the Pawtucket end of the bridge witnessed the morning chase of the frightened deer and the desparate gallop away over the bridgeway on the last trail.

DROUGHT REMAINS UNBROKEN, AND FOREST FIRES RAGE

New Drought Record of Thirty-one Consecutive Rainless Days Has Already Been Set in New York—Boston Completing Its Thirtieth Day Without Rain

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The drought which has prevailed in New York, New Jersey and parts of New England during the last month remained unbroken today while more than a dozen forest fires burned unchecked in various parts of New York.

A new drought record of thirty-one consecutive rainless days already has been set in New York and Boston today was completing its thirtieth day without any rain of measurable quantity. The same conditions prevail within a radius of several hundred miles of Boston.

Adding to the perils of forest fires is the unusual warmth which many sections in the east have experienced

KLAN AND FOES NEAR CLASH FOLLOWING K. OF C. MAN'S DEATH

Thronggs Fill Streets at Berlin, N. H.—Extra Police on Duty—Iron Bar With Which it is Thought Victim Was Hit is Found.

BERLIN, N. H., Nov. 8.—Rumors of theory is that the body then was carried across the road, down through the grounds of the Whitefield Manufacturing company and out on a log raft, whence it was thrown into the mill pond, where the victim, stunned by the blow, came to his death by drowning. There is intense excitement.

Last night, the streets of the city were filled with people on account of widespread talk of a clash between the two factions. Deputy Marshal Alexander Stuart, in charge of the local police force, is maintaining extra vigilance because of several applications that have been made to him by citizens who reported that they feared klan attacks and wished protection.

Candidate Threatened.

Clarence D. Smith, local news agent and a candidate at the recent election for sheriff, as a democrat, was defeated by the present high sheriff, George Brown, a republican, who has held the position for the last 10 years.

During the campaign Smith received several anonymous threats. Late last evening he was called to the telephone and more anonymous threats were made to him. He engaged the threatener in conversation, holding him on the telephone while he caused the call to be traced to a telephone station where four men, who had set out in a taxicab, found a man still engaged in conversation with Smith. He was recognized, but not arrested. He boasted that he was a klansman.

Wednesday before last, at Mt. Forest, which overlooks the city, a huge flaming cross appeared, illuminating the whole city and visible for miles around.

The incident created intense excitement here and crowds rushed to the place by automobile and afoot. Valley after volley of shots were fired into the shrubbery near the foot of the cross. Later a search of the vicinity showed no trace of Klansmen having been there at the time of the shooting. This affair, added to the incidents of last night have served to inflame the populace and to lend it to anticipate trouble.

At Whitefield interest in the cause of the death of Travers, whose dead body was found in the pond about 300 feet from his home early Wednesday morning, was intensified last night by the finding by his brother, Bernard Travers, of a piece of iron pipe which, it is intimated, may have been used in stunning the dead man. No wounds were found on Travers' body but there was an indented wound behind the right ear.

County Solicitor Matthew J. Ryan is investigating and believes this is the weapon with which Travers was slain. If it was murder, early Wednesday morning after reaching his own home, which he was about to enter. His

Violation of the Volstead law and his second within a week, he was fined $100 and sentenced to three months in the house of correction, which he appealed. Last Monday, he was fined $100 for illegal sale.

Taverne was responsible, in a way, for his own arrest this morning. Although armed with a search warrant, the officers failed to find any liquor on the premises, and defendant strenuously denied that he was engaged in the business. Just as the officers were about to give up the quest, a woman entered the establishment and asked for gin. She was informed that none was to be had, but Officer Liston took a chance and said to Taverne: "Why don't you give me one of those pistols in your back pocket?" With this, Taverne ran out the door, pulled a pistol from his "hip" and attempted to throw it in the gutter. He was frustrated in the attempt, and accompanied the officer to the station. A second pistol was found in another pocket.

The activities of the liquor squad yesterday afternoon and last night had successful results. Fred Gauthier paid a fine of $100 for illegal keeping. He was arrested in a Lee street lodging house after Patrolmen Owen Conway, Frank O'Dea and Timothy Mahoney had secured evidence of illegal traffic. Romeo Hobert, proprietor of a restaurant at 150 Lakeview avenue, pleaded not guilty to illegal sale and was fined $300 until Nov. 22. His place was raided by Officers Aldrich, Furey and Keegan. The same establishment was raided several weeks ago.

George Verle pleaded not guilty to illegal sale and was likewise continued to Nov. 22. He was apprehended by the above officers in a store at 47 East Merrimack street last night.

Fire Alarm System On the Blink Again Continued

Chief Saunders reports that the indicator throughout the building registered the box as 1, while the bell counted the signal correctly. At the Branch street house neither the bell nor indicator counted the alarm and this company, which answers first alarms in the "40" circuits, had no indication of where the fire was until it was notified by the telephone operator at fire headquarters.

The other firehouses throughout the city also reported either the bell or indicator, or both, out of order when the alarm sounded, and were unaware of the number of the box until they had been notified by telephone from fire headquarters.

The "40" alarm district, which includes the Chelmsford street and Ayer City sections of the city, has been in poor condition for some time, Chief Saunders said this morning, and whenever an alarm is sounded, there are other companies in the city do not receive the box on their indicators. In many cases and have to walk until Hose 9 has notified headquarters and headquarters in turn has notified them by telephone of the location of the box from which the alarm was sounded.

If Hose 9 is out of its house answering a siren or telephone alarm when a box in that district is sounded, Chief Saunders said, the department has no dependable way to tell which box is ringing in.

Up to the present time the department has been fortunate in that alarm breakdowns have occurred when only minor fires were in progress, but the chief is considerably alarmed for fear that the system will fail to respond when a major fire breaks out and the department will be delayed in answering, allowing time for the fire to make great headway.

and upon his arrival could not find any fire, but found a considerable quantity of burned papers.

The papers, in his opinion, had been stuffed into the partitions and either set or caught fire, but the blaze had smothered itself before the apparatus arrived.

He made an examination of the premises and reported to Chief Saunders that the circumstances surrounding the fire were sufficiently suspicious to warrant a police investigation.

Father suspicious of incendiarism were created early this morning when Chief Saunders received a telephone call from a person representing himself as a tenant of the block who stated there had been several slight fires in the building of late and that a man had been seen on several occasions in the vacant tenement where the fire was, lighting matches.

With this evidence, Chief Saunders visited police headquarters and asked Captain David Petrie of the criminal investigation department to make a complete investigation into the circumstances surrounding the fire.

Captain Petrie vowed the promises made this morning, but had nothing to report on the investigation.

SPECIMEN BALLOT

The city election commissioners have prepared a specimen ballot for the city primaries to be held next Tuesday, containing the names of nine mayors, ten school committee and thirty-nine councilor-at-large candidates. The candidates are numbered.

SCOTT For Mayor

The political scramble is nearly over. You have heard the stories of the different candidates why they should receive your vote. A few of Scott's reasons are:

A business experience of over 25 years, starting at nothing and going up to the top in his line.

Honest and fair in all his dealings with the public. A plain common sense man.

The choice of a mayor by you is nothing more or less than the choice of a competent man into whose hands you would give the conduct of your own private affairs. From what you know and from what you have heard of the candidates—who is best fitted to guard your interests?

"SATISFY YOUR MIND ON THIS IMPORTANT QUESTION AND GO TO THE POLLS AND VOTE ACCORDINGLY."

TRIBUTES TO CHARLES S. MERRILL

In the death of Charles S. Merrill, Lowell has lost one of its most prominent citizens. For the past five years, Mr. Merrill had been engaged as agent, manager and of concern and as a surgery site, was engaged to that and for 15 years, he had been actively engaged in the ice cream business.

Many an adult who knew him in the days of his childhood will remember his generosity and kindness to children.

Mr. Merrill, or "Charlie" Merrill as he was known, was a kindly man, a friend to all, always ready to help in the many little acts of thoughtfulness that only a man of his character could conceive.

A lover of children, he will be missed by every mother and girl in the neighborhood in which he lived.

When illness came upon him, his thoughts were only of the comfort and welfare of those who survive him. And when he last death occurred, his tired body passed into eternal life, a great spirit was left in the hearts of those who knew and loved him.

Mr. Merrill will be remembered always for his pleasant smile, his sincere friendliness and his ever-ready assistance to those in sorrow or distress.

CONFIDENCE GROWING IN THE COTTON TEXTILE MARKETS

STEADINESS IN LAST THREE WEEKS' BUSINESS IN SALES MARKETS AND MILL ORDERS—BOOTT MILL GOODS IN TEXTILE SHOWS—GINGHAMS LOWER

The moderate volume of business being done at the present time in cotton goods helps to ameliorate present conditions market-wise, and the plants of production. There has been a steadiness about the last three weeks' business in sales markets and mill orders, that is strengthening the feeling in New England mill circles that, possibly, confidence in the cotton textile markets is gradually returning.

William Moyers, Klan organizer, has pleaded guilty to the same charge which McCready and Wells have pleaded not guilty and the former is now in jail here awaiting sentence.

Confidence Growing in Cotton Textile Markets

Letters admit that cotton speculators and goods buyers are kept in a condition of uncertainty almost continuously, hesitating on the verge of taking large orders and fearing to take advantage of any quotations that often change in a night to new highs or lows.

A New York textile news writer informs us that one of the keenest analysts in the markets today, who is at the head of a large group of New England and southern properties (the New England Southern mills), is convinced that the foundation for a clearing today, but prospects are not strong movement in goods has been laid.

He claims the rotathers began to clean house two years ago by urging the wide adoption of a hand-to-mouth buring policy until stocks were brought to a favorable condition. The recent financial reports of textile mills in general disclosed unexpectedly low stocks of many standard fabrics, as well as losses suffered by the lack of profit prices that have been current this year.

The Merrimack Manufacturing company, with mills in Lowell and Hunt-ville, Mass., presented this important fact to its stockholders many months ago, and the same thing was emphasized by other local concerns unable to do business at a profit. This situation is clearing today, but prospects are not bright enough to make any local mill agent make any predictions, even now, with sections of the industry running little more evenly and production slowly on the upgrade.

Gingham Lower

The lowering of the price of gingham by the Amoskeag company this week, means that manufacturers of the same cloth will have to follow suit on their particular lines, or curtail production even further. The market in gingham was almost flourishing early in the fall, but during the past three weeks, orders are not coming in as desired, prices evidently keeping buyers from speculating at today's quotations. The lack of orders really caused the Amoskeag to make radical slashes in fresh goods, of from 2 to 3½ cents a yard, hoping to attract badly needed orders for winter production runs.

American Hide & Leather company's latest move in readjusting its financial affairs, came yesterday with an announcement from the Boston offices stating that it is probable that full dividends will be paid on new 8 percent preference stock to the corporation, immediately on its issuance, if stockholders approve recapitaliza-tion plans submitted to them according to present plans. Annual requirements on the 35,000 shares to be created, will be $350,000, compared with earnings

in the first nine months of this year of $327,000 and with expected net of $300,000 for the last quarter. Preslashes in fresh goods, of from 2 to first chance to secure the new stock.

FASHIONS

Slippers from Paris show jeweled anklets and incrustations of jewels over the toe.

Skirts grow shorter and in Paris have reached a point not far distant from the knee. Many of them are very full, either pleated or cut very sharply.

Very gorgeously embroidered sleeves are featured on peasant costumes of wool jersey or crepe de chine.

Embroidery, particularly that with an openwork effect, is used on dresses of serge or repp.

THE GORGEOUS GIRL

Cynthia Gray Gives Away a Few of Milady's Dearest Secrets

BY CYNTHIA GREY

Hardly anyone but me knows that Catharine will be 46 her next birthday. You'd guess her age at about 25. She's as slim as a silver birch tree, and there isn't a line in her face. I never have seen a Follies girl who is any prettier than Catharine when she's dressed for a party. And her clothes are wonderful.

So I was not prepared for the shock I had a month ago when I stopped in at her house on my way down town. George, her husband, was just leaving. He looked gloomier than usual.

Her door was open and I went in. Catharine was sitting up in her lace-trimmed bed, having her coffee. But I hardly recognized her.

Her head was tied up in a white cloth, there was a rubber strap under her chin, and her face and neck were smeared with a sort of gray plaster. She was wearing a large pair of white cotton gloves.

"My word, what's happened to you?" I asked. "Automobile wreck?"

"Nothing," she said. "But don't make me laugh or the mud will crack. Sit down and have some coffee, and I'll tell you all about it."

"Mud?" I repeated. "Mud?"

"Don't pretend you haven't heard of a mud-pack for the face," Catharine said. "You know it's supposed to remove lines and wrinkles. The rubber under my chin is only a strap I wear at night to keep from having a double chin, and the cloth tied around my head is just to hold the water-wave combs in."

"Why the gloves?" I asked. I simply had to know.

"Just to keep the cold-cream on my hands from soiling the coverlet," Catharine explained.

I went over to the dressing-table. Beside the cream was a smaller box labeled "Nose Cream" and a bottle of "Muscle Oil." There was a large white tray filled with rouge and lipstic and long eye-brow pencils. There were five bottles of French perfume, and a great jar of hair pomade.

"What does Jack think of all this? I couldn't help saying.

"Oh, he's used to it now," Catharine said lightly. "When we were first married, he couldn't bear to see me with cold cream on my face even. But I just told him I was going to keep young."

"How can he kiss you good-bye through that mud-pack?" I went on.

"Oh, he doesn't any more, anyway. I hardly see him in the morning. You know, yourself, how matter-of-fact married people are."

But I know that not all of them are matter-of-fact. And that if they are, something's wrong. And it's easy to see that Catharine has fallen as a wife because she doesn't care how she looks when her husband's around as long as the rest of the world thinks she's beautiful and young.

THE UNTIDY HOUSE

Can Never Be a Home, Is What Cynthia Gray Thinks About It

BY CYNTHIA GREY

I went over to my neighbor's, Margie Forbes, the other morning, to set my cookie-cutter that she'd borrowed. Margie was sitting at the dining-room table, still in her kimono and bedroom slippers, although it was 10 o'clock. The table was littered with coffee cups, crumpled napkins and the library book that Margie had been reading.

"I don't know what I'm sitting here for, when I've got a million dishes to wash," she said. "All these and the ones from last night's dinner, besides. But really I'm so blue that I just haven't enough pep to budge."

Then I saw that she had been crying.

"Fred was in one of his mean moods this morning," she went on.

"Men are always grumpy in the morning," I comforted her.

"That's no excuse for them," Margie said briskly. "I'm grumpy, too, but that doesn't give me an excuse not to get up and cheerfully get breakfast without even taking the time to bathe and dress myself."

This was something new to me. I had never heard of a woman getting breakfast in anything but a house-dress or bungalow apron before. They belong to the same class of clothes that a chef's white cap does.

"Jim should have married one of these poison-heal women," Margie said slowly. "He has a fit if I leave the dinner dishes until the next morning. But we'd never get to a movie if I had to do all that work."

The house certainly did look very uncomfortable. The rugs were wrinkled up, and the chairs were dusty. Even the lamps in their wicker basket seemed bedraggled and sloppy.

Margie led me into the kitchen to find the cookie-cutter. She found it in the lower oven of her gas range. It was quite rusty.

"This house is so damp that everything in it rusts," Margie explained.

I went out through the next back yard toward my own house.

The Forbes have the prettiest lawn of anyone on our street. The vegetable garden, where Fred Forbes works until dark every summer night, is as tidy as a checkerboard.

And now I know why he keeps it that way. It's because it's the one and only thing in his home life that's clean and beautiful as it should be. It's his refuge from Margie and Margie's house.

Long or Short Hair?

FIVE MINUTES MAKE THIS CHANGE

BY MARIAN HALE
N.E.A. Service Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Two heads are better than one—particularly if one head has long hair and the other short.

For a while it did look as if there might be some necessity for taking a stand on this hair question, and come out definitely for or against the bob.

Latest importations from Paris in the way of evening and afternoon gowns do seem to be against the bob. Their dignified lines and gorgeous fabrics demand formal couture.

And sports clothes and morning frocks continue to demand the youthful bobbed hair.

There were indications of a deadlock until the hair merchants saw a splendid opportunity for service. They are going in seriously for transformations that really transform.

Now a woman may be bobbed in the morning and flaunt a Greek bun, a psyche, a mass of curls or any form of coiffure she likes in the evening.

Armand Blatt, one of the leading creators of hair styles in New York, says: "Undoubtedly a great many women will bow to Paris and let their hair grow, but the really clever woman will manage to sacrifice neither style nor comfort."

The time limit on transformations is said to be one minute—less time than most long-haired women take to wind up their locks.

Cynthia Grey Says:

When a man asks a woman to marry him, this is what he's really saying in her:

"Will you love me always, and mend my clothes, and have my meals on time, and bring up my children, and live within my income, and be cheerful through it all?"

And the woman, who is usually young and heedless and terribly in love, answers, "Yes" as a matter of course.

Old Mother Nature, who is an incorrigible match-maker, doesn't care a fig whether a girl is prepared to be a good home-maker or not. Her job is finished when the minister finishes his at the altar.

Of the thousands of autumn brides this year, not many are trained for their job. The bride who can beat up a panful of fluffy biscuits and broil an inch-thick steak is as rare as a white peacock... and worth her weight in platinum as well.

As a matter of fact, mothers don't train their daughters for the work ahead of them as wives. Girls are taught to dance and play the piano, to typewrite and teach school and a hundred other very fine and useful things.

But not one in fifty ever goes into the kitchen and the sewing room with her mother to learn the all-important profession of housekeeping.

A girl gets much advice about being sweet and "bagging" her man but not much about caring for him afterward.

Almost every young couple has been told that the first year is hardest—that it's the difficult time of adjusting and adapting yourselves to each other's ways.

And so it is. But much of the trouble could be avoided if the bride knew a little more about making up a household budget or sewing on buttons.

The girl who knows how to run her house right from the start has twice the chance of having a happy one than the girl who is just learning.

For example, there's the problem of entertaining. It doesn't cost much to make a bowl of salad, some rolls and coffee and have a few friends in for Sunday night supper. And a dozen such evenings will add more color and fun to life.

For a group of friends in common one of the strongest ties married people have. No matter how much in love with each other a man and his wife are, there's something lacking in their lives if they don't know other couples to visit occasionally.

For all of us are grown-up children, more or less, and the most serious-minded man in the world needs to relax and forget his cares in an evening of one-stepping or mah-jongg now and then.

Home-making in its best sense isn't drudgery, but art. It takes the eye of an artist to know that an orange-colored cushion and a bowl of yellow nasturtiums would brighten up the gloomy corner of the house. And then if you go ahead and make the cushion and grow the nasturtiums in a window-box, you're not only an artist but an economist besides.

There's undoubtedly a lot for a girl to learn if she is going to keep her home the place of comfort and charm that it can be.

Harvard-Princeton and Lafayette-Rutgers Games Features of Today's Program

53,000 OUT TO SEE HARVARD-PRINCETON GAME AT CAMBRIDGE

First of East's Outstanding Gridiron Clashes Takes Place This Afternoon, When Crimson Grapples With Tigers in Opening Test of "Big Three Supremacy"

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (by the Associated Press).—The calm before the final storm in the football season will come today, on eastern gridiron, when Princeton and Harvard, and Lafayette and Rutgers meet in the two more important contests of a spotted program.

The Tiger-Crimson clash at Cambridge will be the first big game of the year. Rutgers, one of the six unbeaten eleven of the east, is figured to lose to Lafayette, which defeated Pitt and W. & J. and outrushed Pennsylvania although losing to the latter last week.

Lafayette, another unbeaten eleven, will be tested by old Cross Penn State and Carnegie Tech will connect at State college with the Nittany Lion a slight favorite over the Tartars, who, however, were good enough to win from Pittsburgh, which later tied Syracuse. The Cornell-Penn State meeting, which was action last Saturday by Crighton, will clash with Boston college in the most important intersectional game on an eastern gridiron.

Harvard will enter the game a strong favorite over Princeton, whose hopes for victory will be placed almost entirely upon the past performances of Tiger teams which have played their best games of the season against Harvard.

Lafayette, with a squad undoubtedly one of the most powerful in the east, will be faced with the task of outscoring a smart trio of Rutgers' backs including Berkner, leading scorer of the east; Hutz, one of the best kickers of the year, and Terrell, an elusive runner in the open field. The game will be played at Princeton stadium because of an unusual demand for tickets.

Other prominent eleven of the western section will face opponents not calculated to distract their positions. Yale will play substitutes against Maryland in order to give Princeton a chance to play its two Saturday games on the next two Saturdays. Pennsylvania, the lone team in the east neither beaten nor tied, will meet Georgetown for the first time. In 30 years, Syracuse, unbeaten, but tied by Pitt, will clash with West Virginia Wesleyan, one of the conquerors of the Navy.

Army will be called upon to play second football to win from the University of Florida which beat Georgia Tech. Navy, after a firm stand last week against Penn State, promises to improve its poor record for the year, if not the expense of Artie Brown plays the Haskell Indians. Dartmouth takes on Boston University, Cornell faces Susquehanna and Columbia meets a local rival in New York university.

Colgate and West Virginia, two of the high-scoring machines of the season, will provide the most interesting duals of the Pittsburgh district where Pitts meets Geneva and Waynesburg clashes with W. & J.

Williams and Wesleyan will meet in the first battle of the "little three" series.

Harvard-Princeton Game
CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 8 (by the Associated Press).—The first of the east's outstanding gridiron clashes takes place this afternoon when Harvard grapples with Princeton in the opening test of "Big Three Supremacy."

A crowd of 53,000, forming one of the most colorful spectacles of the season, is expected to witness the fray, which the Crimson will enter a decided favorite. Neither eleven, however, has proved of outstanding value to date and while Harvard, with better material, has shown greater steadiness, the Tigers have rallied after numerous disappointments and whipped themselves to characteristic fighting pitch for their biggest test so far.

Harvard, with a strong advantage in kicking, also has shown a more formidable attack than Princeton, counts upon its veteran line to check the Crimson's drive. Both teams have undergone important shifts since their last important battles, Harvard making several line changes while the Tigers will experiment with their "light weight" backfield.

Harvard, though it has been drilled to versatility on attack, is expected to rely more upon old-fashioned gaining methods than Princeton, which has shown little driving power in previous games and probably will follow a safer route for scoring efforts. With many bright object lessons in the past, the Tigers also have been coached to

PONIES AND WILDCATS IN GRID CONTEST

The championship of Centralville will be contested on the First street oval tomorrow afternoon when the Ponies and the Wildcats, two rival Centralville organizations meet for the first time this year. A bitter feeling of rivalry exists between the players of both teams, which gives the fans the chance to feel that one of the best contests of the year will be in order. The spectators may expect any and all kinds of football, as gridiron etiquette will be thrown to the winds when the referee gives the signal permission to go to it at 2:30 o'clock.

Not since the Ponies and the Princetonians battled to a scoreless tie last year has there been so much interest manifested in game in Jersey. Since arrangements for the struggle were completed, the clash has been on everybody's tongue, but nobody seems able to pick the winner. To do this is a difficult task, as the contenders are so evenly matched that a tie score is possible. The players themselves, however, are confident that a deadlock will not exist when play is called.

HOCKEY PROBLEMS

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—The United States Hockey association will be invited to a conference on international hockey problems with officials of the Ontario Hockey Association to be held here December 5. It was announced after meeting of the latter organization last night. The ban on teams of the Ontario association meeting United States clubs in exhibition games was continued.

LOWELL AND HAVERHILL IN ANNUAL CLASH

An optimistic delegation of Lowell high football fans left this city this noon bound for Haverhill and the Haverhill stadium when Lowell and Haverhill met in an annual gridiron combat this afternoon. The squad of sturdy Lowell football players departed down the river this morning and went through a snappy drill on the field of battle shortly before game time.

Brilliant of the confidence that wins games, the red and gray eleven with each individual bent on returning home with the first football laurels a decade and a half of years, entered the Haverhill stadium amid the enthusiastic cheers of several hundred loyal supporters from the Springfield city.

LOWELL REPRESENTED AT THE BIG GAME

On at least four Saturdays during the football season Lowell folks flock to Cambridge in large numbers to watch Harvard's major games and today was no exception. The Princeton game always is one of the most colorful on the Crimson schedule and practically every Harvard man in the city, with family members and friends, went over the road and by train to the Stadium this noon. Lowell never was much of a Princeton city, but close followers of football have always seen in the Tiger one of the scrappiest and best elevens of the year and therefore interest in the game is high.

FIRST STREET OVAL

Gridiron Gasip

Tomorrow's program contains a game on the old Fair grounds between the Butlers and the South Boston All-Stars, and a clash on the First street oval between the Ponies and the Wildcats.

Bursting of an eleven that is second only to the famous Penn Marquette of their own town, the Butlers, the South Boston All-Stars with invincible Butler stronghold on the old Fair grounds tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Although the Butlers have given local fans a lot to think about in the line of football features, the management wishes to state in booking the South Boston outfit for tomorrow, the best of all attractions has been carded.

Possessing a terrific line-plunging hard and a staunch forward wall, the South Boston, undefeated in three weeks, will come to Lowell with a reputation for an aggressive play.

To combat the reported ground-swinging propensities for the visitors, the Butlers have perfected a defense that will be revelation to all who see them in battle array.

Intent on hurling South Boston's All-Stars from the pinnacle of fame they enjoy today, the Butlers will open up with everything they have, regardless of the fact that their every move will be watched by members of other teams and due to lack of time, the Butlers will be beaten.

The St. Peter's Cadets will absent themselves from the city. They have a game scheduled with a Brighton team.

The Kenwood Rovers are trying hard to arrange a game. Since bowing to a superior Tremont team Lawrence, the Rovers have undergone changes that are said to be effective.

Their object game this year will be with the Ponies the Sunday after Thanksgiving.

The St. Peter's Cadets and the Butlers are down on the books for a game on the old Fair grounds on Sunday, Nov. 16.

A week from tomorrow, the O.M.I. Cadets will play the Chelsea naval hospital team on the North common.

Manager Walsh of the Butlers received a telephone message from South Boston this morning requesting the Butlers to make reservations for about 200 South Boston fans who intend to accompany their All-Stars to the Fair grounds Sunday. The visitors will come over the road in bus line style and will arrive at the scene of battle in good season. They have an organized cheering section, it is understood.

The visiting crew gives evidence of being the heaviest aggregation the Butlers will meet this season. Fans, however, are anxious to see how the Butlers will fare in the face of such adversity. If they win, it will be a feather in their cap, and realizing this they will try every known trick of the game.

The Butlers are not relying on weight to carry them through to victory. It is not the kind of play either that they count, but rather the uncanny sequence in which O'Hara calls them. A new assortment will be presented tomorrow.

If every fan who attends the contest gets his bite the budget will be small. Success is the worth some financial consideration.

The Butlers will make their debut in new togs tomorrow. All the players will be numbered.

O'Hare will probably start Popp, Moche and Bond against the Bostonians. Popp is a former Buffalo All-American player. Moche started a few years ago with the University of Maine. Bond and Eddie Bench, quarterback, Eddie, left halfback, and Bert, fullback, also will be on Dan Allen, fullback, also will be on the side lines when the referee's whistle blows.

The Butlers will enter the game with a fast signal drill and kicking practice. The side lines, when the referee's whistle blows.

The Butlers will be in good condition. Maryland is not as it was a year ago, largely because of the graduation of McQuade, Groves and Pollock, but Curley Byrd, Maryland mentor, wears a mask of optimism, silent and significant.

It is Yale's third intersectional game of the season, having scored victories over North Carolina and Georgia.

The probable lineups:

Yale Hart, le. Ward, rt. Joss, lt. Joss, rt. J. Bonner, Bonham, rt. J. Lewis, Root, rt. Butterworth, rt. Osborne, re. Langdon, Bunnell, qb. Suppes, Kline, Ibb. Pugh, Pond, rbs. Osborn, Ibb. Bratty, Potts, qb. Wadsworth, fb. Official: Referee, E. L. Miller, (Penn State); umpire, J. J. Cosgrave, (Cornell); linesmen, G. N. Bankhead, (Dartmouth); field judge, W. A. Quigley, (Pennsylvania.)

The Lowell high lineup in the Haverhill stadium at the start of today's game was as follows: Kelleher, Sutherland, H. Muldoon, H. Horan, J. Ryan, J. Gauthier, rt. Heron, re. Saund, qb. Riley, Ibb. Barton, fb. Allard, rbs.

The Lowell high has not beaten Haverhill since 1910. That year Loggat ran 40 yards for a touchdown and kicked the goal for the deciding point. In those days, a touchdown counted only 5. The final score was: Lowell 6, Haverhill 5. Since then it has been an uninterrupted succession of defeat for Lowell.

The score today will be close, but Lowell has a wonderful chance to win.

There's a thriller on the card for Centralville fans tomorrow. The principals in the main bout on the First street oval will be the Centralville Ponies and the Centralville Wildcats, who will mix matters in old-time fashion from 2:30 o'clock until the final whistle sounds. If you don't think this game is a crucial one, ask any of the boys across the bridge what it means.

Most of the Wildcats are boys who have been anxious to get a crack at the Ponies since the beginning of the year. They say the Ponies have the impression that they are the whole show in Jersey but they won't be proud after tomorrow, they say.

Last year, fans in this growing section of the city, with one to one of the season's most exciting games when the Ponies exchanged greetings with the Princetonians on the old ball grounds in Lakewood avenue. The Princetonians did not organize this season, so the Wildcats have taken their place. The majority of the Wildcats are ex-Princeton warriors, so that tomorrow's clash is but a renewal of the war waged to a scoreless tie a year ago.

The Ponies have won their last three games by decisive scores, holding their opponents to zeros. If the Wildcats register against them they will be the first team to turn the trick in a month. With the added incentive of the sectional championship, the Wildcats will offer strenuous resistance to anything the Ponies present.

The Ponies have won their last three games by decisive scores, holding their opponents to zeros. If the Wildcats register against them they will be the first team to turn the trick in a month. There is one thing certain about to-

BUTLERS VS. SO. BOSTON

Two Powerful Teams to Wage Battle on Old Fair Grounds Tomorrow

morrow's clash between the above-mentioned team, and that is that Bill Dudley will not referee. Not that "Bill" is incompetent, but purely and solely because he is interested in one of the contending teams, and it would be an injustice to have him in charge of the game under these circumstances. He will be a spectator tomorrow.

Coach Crossland will be in the Ponies line-up.

The St. Peter's Cadets will absent themselves from the city. They have a game scheduled with a Brighton team.

The game can't go wrong with these experts handling affairs. Joe McGlone, incapacitated in the Princeton-Harvard game a year ago, got back into harness for the crimson this season and played a whale of a game.

He is a fighter and puts all kinds of zip into the Harvard team. When Bob Fisher feels he wants to gain a certain objective, he gives orders to have McGlone carry the ball. Joe does the rest as a general rule. Art Lynch, hauled in here, is well known in Lowell. He was a star around Lowell High and Lawrence academy. Later he went to Chaminade College in Buffalo and still later to Notre Dame. Ned Condon, the field judge, was at Providence college a graduate from high school. He is now attending B.C.

Coach O'Hare will probably start Popp, Moche and Bond against the Bostonians. Popp is a former Buffalo All-American player. Moche started a few years ago with the University of Maine. It is Yale's third intersectional game of the season, having scored victories over North Carolina and Georgia.

The probable lineups:

Yale Hart, le. Ward, rt. Joss, lt. Joss, rt. J. Bonner, Bonham, rt. J. Lewis, Root, rt. Butterworth, rt. Osborne, re. Langdon, Bunnell, qb. Suppes, Kline, Ibb. Pugh, Pond, rbs. Osborn, Ibb. Bratty, Potts, qb. Wadsworth, fb. Official: Referee, E. L. Miller, (Penn State); umpire, J. J. Cosgrave, (Cornell); linesmen, G. N. Bankhead, (Dartmouth); field judge, W. A. Quigley, (Pennsylvania.)

The Lowell high lineup in the Haverhill stadium at the start of today's game was as follows: Kelleher, Sutherland, H. Muldoon, H. Horan, J. Ryan, J. Gauthier, rt. Heron, re. Saund, qb. Riley, Ibb. Barton, fb. Allard, rbs.

The Lowell high has not beaten Haverhill since 1910. That year Loggat ran 40 yards for a touchdown and kicked the goal for the deciding point. In those days, a touchdown counted only 5. The final score was: Lowell 6, Haverhill 5. Since then it has been an uninterrupted succession of defeat for Lowell.

The score today will be close, but Lowell has a wonderful chance to win.

There's a thriller on the card for Centralville fans tomorrow. The principals in the main bout on the First street oval will be the Centralville Ponies and the Centralville Wildcats, who will mix matters in old-time fashion from 2:30 o'clock until the final whistle sounds. If you don't think this game is a crucial one, ask any of the boys across the bridge what it means.

All Riverdale A.A. players are requested to meet on the North common tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock for the game with the Franklins. To be eligible to play against the St. Peter's Cadets Seconds later, all players must appear on the common tomorrow.

The O.M.I. Cadet Seconds send in the following:

"In last night's Sun I noticed that the Immaculate Conception Junior Holy Name team and the Waverhill Sheld park would play Sunday afternoon at Sheld park to decide the 110-115 pound championship of the city. I, as manager of the O.M.I. Cadet Seconds, wish to state to the general public that my team defeated both of these teams earlier in the season and I think this is enough to prove to both teams that they have no right to claim the title. We will be happy to make arrangements for a game. They also state they have had no time to practice and prepare, but will be willing to accommodate the Ponies in a week or two. The coach of the Ponies is requested to go in touch with Manager Golden of the Wildcates tonight."

And that's that, regardless of what has been said before. A benefit soccer game is on the card for the oval at 2:30.

This is a good break for the Butlers. The several hundred fans who intended to witness the affair in Centralville will now direct their attention to the Butler-South Boston clash at the old Fair grounds.

More People Contributed to Campaign Which Closed Tuesday Than Ever Before

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A report to be sent to Republican National Chairman William M. Butler within a few days by members of the national contributors' committee will show that more people contributed to the campaign which closed Tuesday than ever before and that for the first time in political history a national campaign has been run without a deficit, according to Guy Emerson, chairman of the committee.

Four years ago the republicans found themselves with a deficit of $1,600,000 at the close of the campaign and it took them nearly four years to pay it off. This year more than $8,000 contributors gave about $4,000,000 toward the campaign. It is believed that after the few small outstanding bills are cleared up there will be an actual small balance with which to keep alive a contribution organization to pay the way for collection four years hence.

At a meeting between John W. Davis, the defeated democrat presidential candidate, National Chairman Clem Shaver and Jessie Jones, the national committee's director of finance today, plans were discussed for the handling of the democratic deficit, said to be about $200,000. Officials at democratic campaign headquarters said that in all probability the plan of former years would be renewed and that democratic organizations throughout the states would be levied upon a pro-rata basis.

FRENCH PREMIER UPHELD AFTER STORMY SESSION

PARIS, Nov. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—The Journal Officiel today shows that the declaration: "We will take the money where we can," which was attributed to the confusion of the chamber of deputies debate yesterday to Premier Herriot, was made by M. Renaud, one of the leaders of the socialist faction of the governmental majority.

The premier, pressed by the opposition to make clear his position regarding a capital levy, said he refused to be drawn into the trap which was being laid for him.

The chamber after a stormy session sustained the premier on a question of confidence by voting, 333 to 177, for indefinite adjournment of an interpellation regarding a capital levy.

10 P. C. WAGE CUT IN AMOSKEAG MILLS

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 8.—Notices were posted in the Amoskeag mills here today announcing that a 10 per cent wage reduction would become effective on Monday. The wage cut affects 14,000 textile operatives. The reduction is of the ratio proposed at the recent conference between mill representatives and the textile workers' committee of 268 delegates. At the present time there are about 5,000 operatives working on a four-day week schedule but more departments are expected to be operated in the near future.

SUSPENDED PILOT APPEALS

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Captain Alfred W. Call of Everett, former captain of the steamer Boston, whose license was ordered revoked by the board of United States steamboat inspectors in Providence, R. I., last month, as a result of the collision of the Boston with the tugboat Swift Arrow in Vineyard Sound, July 21, presented an appeal today to the United States Supervising Inspector Captain Oscar G. Haines. The appeal was taken on the ground that the finding of the board was not in accordance with the evidence.

RED CROSS SUNDAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Preparedness for emergencies will be the theme of the observance tomorrow of Red Cross Sunday. Clergymen throughout the country, it was announced today, will stress the peace-time work of the society and call upon their congregations to enroll in its membership during the period beginning on Armistice day.

DISCUSSES ABOLITION OF R. R. LABOR BOARD

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—Labor legislation pending in Congress, particularly the Howell-Barkley bill, which would abolish the railroad labor board, was discussed by representatives of railroad labor organizations, including the train service brotherhoods, here today. The conference was called by Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The Howell-Barkley bill, introduced in the house and senate at the last session, is first on the calendar of Congress which reconvenes Dec. 1. It would substitute joint adjustment boards for the labor board in railroad labor relations.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY AND FRAUD CHARGED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—W. A. Jackson, president of the National Independent Spiritualists' Association, and ten other officers and directors of the organization were named in warrants issued here last night charging criminal conspiracy, fraud and lesser offenses.

The warrants were based on the alleged issuance to a Los Angeles Times reporter of a certificate of ordination as a minister of the gospel, a charter for church and an endorsement as a spiritual healer and medium for a consideration of $150.

EARTHQUAKES PREDICTED

BOLOGNA, Italy, Nov. 8.—Raphael Bandalini, the seismologist, predicts earthquakes for Nov. 11 and from Nov. 16 to 17. The center of the shocks, he says, will be in the extreme east, probably in the Philippines Islands.

The foregoing is a true copy of said brief and of the order thereon.

WILL BUTLER HELP THE MILLS?

President Coolidge's sweeping victory has turned the attention of the nation to William M. Butler, the campaign manager who assumed command of the situation early in the year and dictated practically every move and every step taken by the party leaders, its candidates and even its national convention. True, it is, of course, that President Coolidge was frequently consulted and that he acted as a sort of censor upon the utterances of some of the fiery campaigners such as General Dawes, Secretary Willard and a few others, but in all else Mr. Butler was the general in charge of the republican forces. His role in the campaign just closed might be compared to that of Mark Hanna in the McKinley campaign of 1896. Mr. Hanna said he would furnish the candidate if the corporations would furnish the funds, and this they did to an extent unparalleled in the history of the country—$16,000,000 it was estimated. For this generosity they were privileged to write the tariff schedules they wanted and these became part of the new tariff law. Then followed the era of the big trusts which it took nearly twenty years to bring under the control of law. We do not believe Mr. Butler made such promises to the big contributors to the republican campaign chest; but they will be remembered in the good republican times ahead.

But what of Mr. Butler? What will be his reward? Already he is mentioned as a prospective candidate for Senator Lodge's place, as the sage of Nahant, we regret to say, is now critically ill. Mr. Butler has been but little known in politics, his principal business being that of cotton manufacturer in New Bedford. At first he was mentioned as candidate for the senate against Senator Walsh; but having taken charge of President Coolidge's campaign, the nomination was offered Governor Cox who declined, and then it went to Gillett. In case of a sudden vacancy for United States senator, the governor can make a temporary appointment pending the election of an incumbent at a regular or special election. In such an emergency, Butler would undoubtedly be the choice of the governor. If a special election were held Senator Walsh might be a candidate, and again he might not, as the Coolidge drive for Butler would be overpowering.

Butler is a prominent mill man. Is it too much to expect that he will set the government machinery in motion to overcome the depression that has settled upon the textile industries of New England? With a great pull upon congress and every department of the government, he should be able to do something toward making good those republican slogans used during the campaign regarding the "full dinner pail," "an end of unemployment" and a "speedy return of prosperity." All these phrases were frequently used by the republican spellbinders and now the time has arrived, at which, as young Col. Roosevelt would put it, the G. O. P. is expected "to deliver the goods," or stand discredited on its campaign promises. Which will it be? Time will tell.

COOLIDGE AND CONGRESS

President Coolidge has won a great personal victory and it now appears that he will have a solid republican majority to back him up in both branches of congress. It is always better that the executive and legislative departments of the government are under the control of the same party in order that deadlocks may be avoided and that the work of the administration may not be retarded through political bickerings. The present congress is so divided between the two major parties and the republican insurgents that no party can claim control. Such a condition in England would precipitate a general election, but here we have a different system and have to fight it out as best we can through coalition and compromise. The indications at present point to a republican majority with, however, a remnant of the La Follette insurgency which can work only for obstruction in the interests not of the people but of socialistic radicalism.

SOME DEMOCRATIC HOODOOS

Over the political ruins for which he and his brother have been largely responsible, William Jennings Bryan comes out as usual to tell the democrats what they must do to appear in the fight four years hence, presumably under his guidance and tutelage.

It is high time the democratic party ceased to accept any dictation from Mr. Bryan or his brother in Nebraska. He made the people of his own state so sick of him that he had to move south in order to be even mentioned in the counsels of the party he presumes to lead; and now he continues to dictate to the party in whose temporary ruin he has been a prominent factor.

Another supposed leader, who figured in the last democratic convention is William G. McAdoo. He, too, is a dead-weight upon the party. Like Bryan, he hastens to advise the party as to its future course, evidently intending to be a candidate for the presidency four years hence; but his democracy has so much of selfishness that the best service he can render the party is to get out and transfer his allegiance either to the republican party or the motley aggregation following the chimerical whims of the ambidexterous La Follette. McAdoo sat in his tent during the recent campaign and under various excuses managed to put up a bluff that he was unable to take any part in the contest. His alliance with the Ku Klux Klan, his fight for control of the convention and his subsequent course should eliminate him from any future prominence in the leadership of the party.

The two men who have pre-eminently fought the real battles of democracy against overwhelming odds and under the handicaps of the McAdoos, the Bryans, etc., are John W. Davis and Gov. Smith of New York. There are two men whose democracy is in the right stamp. They are not seeking merely the opportunity to use the party for their own selfish purposes. They fought for party victory with such disinterested earnestness and ability that every man who believes in the democratic party must feel that it is deeply indebted to both for the magnificent campaign they conducted.

If the party has any future honor to confer, these are the men who should come first and foremost above all others; and in order to get away from the perennial hoodooes that have helped to drag the party down to defeat, William Jennings Bryan, who uses the party in all respects as one of his political assets, should be silenced or suppressed whenever he assumes the role of dictator as he has done every year since he stopped running for the presidency. He seems to think that the offering he lands the party up "Sail Creek," the more it should commit its destitutes to his leadership. He should set out as a world apostle of prohibition, an American rival of "Pussyfoot" Johnson, a failing in which he would doubtless attain the utmost success.

TO ABOLISH JOHN BULL

England is arguing whether or not she should do away with John Bull, the fat gentleman with the square-top plug hat. For about 200 years John Bull has been the symbol of England in song, story and cartoon. The English now wonder if John isn't too old-fashioned and no longer representative of their country.

This starts me thinking: Does Uncle Sam as pictured in cartoons and at masquerades, still symbolize America?

Would it be appropriate to give him a new suit of clothes? Here is a chance for the cartoonists. If an attempt is made to bring Uncle Sam up to date, a barber's first suggestion would be to shave off the venerable gentleman's chin whiskers. It has always been a source of worry to us that these would sooner or later get caught in the machinery.

Time was, when chin whiskers were in style. So were Sam's trousers that button with a strap under the instep of his heavy boots. So was his fortification coat.

Uncle Sam was pictured to represent a conservative, level-headed, shrewd old Yankee farmer—chewing a straw while he made wise cracks. And he looked the part—back rounded in the long ago.

It would be impossible for the cartoonists to create a figure that would symbolize modern America, the average American or even the American government.

There could be no agreement. Time is developing many factions and disrespectful critics.

We urge the English to leave well enough alone, to retain John Bull as their symbol. And it is best to keep Uncle Sam as he is, although his manner is not so modern as that of John Bull. However, there would be no harm in shaving off those chin whiskers, if for no other reason than to see what he looks like underneath. As for trying a dress suit on him, or golfing knickers or swagger sport clothes—all that is up to the cartoonists.

The figure of Uncle Sam has become legendary. He stands out as one of the early heroic characters that will be plentiful in the old age of our civilization. Uncle Sam is firmly established in folk-lore, even though Vulcan or Ajax might be more appropriate symbols of national America.

THE DIVORCE EVIL

Throughout the country in 1923, there were 1,223,825 marriages and 165,139 divorces, which is 13.5 per cent. In Massachusetts there were 35,200 marriages and 3,587 divorces, an increase of 356 over the year 1922. In this state there was one divorce for every ten marriages. The only state in the Union in which divorces are outlawed is Maryland, which repealed all laws permitting divorce in 1873. The states that have the highest percentage of divorces are Texas, with 14,840, and Illinois, with 17,300. The percentage in the former is 21 and in the latter 14.5. The marriage tie is evidently of slight binding force in Illinois and still less so in Texas.

RESISTING POWER

No use getting scared because tuberculosis of the lungs has killed possibly 50 million people in the last 43 years. Skilled medical specialists will tell you, autopsies show that four out of every five have T. B. at some time or other in life, usually in very mild form. They are attacked—but conquer the invader or hold it in check.

The danger isn't so much in germs as in the body's powers of resistance being broken down so it cannot fight germs. Fright and too much worry about self are often as deadly as germs and low bodily resistance combined.

PASSPORTS

American Bankers' Association urges Uncle Sam to negotiate with foreign governments to eliminate the passport system. Then you could travel freely from one country to another, but it will never be done.

The passport in Europe is more a pose than a tourist device. We might profit by the German system, making every new arrival in a town report to police headquarters within 24 hours to get his papers in order. Fugitives would be more readily traced, even in a large country.

THINKING IT OVER

A man once arrived at a seaside resort and was shown to a room in a hotel. Shortly afterward a friend called on him and found him sitting gloomily surveying a trunk that stood against the wall. "What's the matter?" asked the caller. "I want to get a suit of clothes out of that trunk," was the answer. "Well, what's the key?" asked the boy. "No, I have the key all right," he said, "but I'm afraid that trunk. She expected to come with me, but was prevented. To my certain knowledge she put in enough to fill three trunks the way a man would pack them. If I open it, the trunk will blow up all over the room and you'll never get the room again." "I'm wondering whether it would be cheaper to go and buy a new suit of clothes or two more trunks."

SEEN AND HEARD

An alligator will attain a length of 12 feet in 15 years while an alligator skin suitcase won't in a million.

Campaign speeches over the radio have boosted movie attendance even more than salacious pictures.

If all the men who failed to vote on election day were placed in one group they would suffice the candidate elected.

Counted Them

Little Willie was wearing his first pair of pants for the first time. As he played in his father's law office another lawyer dropped in. The two lawyers talked away together, but the word about the new pants was said. Willie stood this as long as he could. Then he said in a careless and indifferent way: "There's three pairs of pants in this room,"—Minneapolis Tribune.

Rosie Fared Well

The dear old gentleman was fond of children. But he shook his head when he had met them up-to-date. "Reinig Jones, aged 72, sold the old gentleman to Reggie, "And whose little boy is this, I wonder?" "There are two ways you can find out," replied the little boy. "And what are these my child?" was the beaming question. "You might guess or you might inquire," replied Reggie in a bored tone.

A Laugh a Day

Everybody is interested in the doings of kid days. You were a kid once, yourself—and maybe now you have some little folks of your own. "Freckles and His Friends," by C. M. Blosser, is a comic that appeals to young and old alike. It recalls to krovounus their younger days and his pictures, for little folks, the every day life of events they themselves are living. Freckles himself is just an all-round American boy, the star of this real kid comic. Read about "Freckles and His Friends" every day in The Sun.

Basketry Expert

A young woman recently received instruction in the art of Indian basketry and had made several copies of Indian baskets of which she was very proud. A friend, who had been living in Arizona, called upon the young woman, who showed the baskets with considerable pride. "They are really very well done," commented the visitor, "but, of course, they are not the real Indian baskets." "Why, Mrs. Robinson, indignantly cried the maker, "how can you say that when I just told you that I made them myself?"—Hoboken Sunday Herald.

Lecture by Fr. O'Reilly

Sup.-Hill, old sun: Rev. Matthew O'Reilly, O.M.I., who spent the last five years in the southern part of Africa at Kimberley, Namaqualand, etc., in the Free State, gave a very interesting lecture at YMCA hall on life as he saw it in Africa. He dealt at some length with the causes leading up to the Boer war which was then in progress. He compared the conditions of the Boers under British rule to that of the Irish and justified the Boer resistance.

Midwives Women's Club

Before the Middlesex Women's Club Prof. Charles Elliott Norton of Harvard gave his fifth lecture in the course regarding his discussion of the works of Dante. The lecturer described the passage of Dante in imagination leading up to the scene of hell led by the spirit of Virgil, and then the approach to the gates of hell, parallel to the abode of the man purified from sin. The lecturer told of the triumphal procession with Beatrice as guide and quoted Dante's own words in the poem. The culmination of the scene is the image of Beatrice as the central figure merging into the guide through the realm of a sportsman than "win as a thug, and the team this you has shown the good effect of his teaching. Win or lose today in Haverhill, "Jimmie" has the right "dope," and within a few years, with the proper school spirit backing him, he will have one of the best school-boy aggregations on any New England gridiron, for he is building on the right foundation.

To a Bonnet,

Ye lovely gems of innocence
The objects of my constant care.
From each distracting thought I turn,
To see you blooming fresh and fair.

What tho' the piercing wintry blast,
Falls like a blare upon my ear,
And the cold tempest loudly roars,
Sweet flowers, it cannot reach you here.

What do I see?—your lovely form,
Now languish!—must ye, then, decay?
Ye pine for spring's refreshing showers,
And for the sun's more genial ray.

Then fare ye well!—your senseless loves,
I'll bathe with tears of fond regret;
I loved ye when you looked so fair—
Wither'd and dead, I love you yet!

Thus, when some dear one, from our side,
Is torn by death's cold hand away,
We mourn the cherished treasure gone,
And weeping, kiss the lifeless clay.

O'er the bright joys forever crushed,
With memory brood with fond regret;
We loved her when like us she smiled,
And tho' no more, we love her yet.

—FRANCES JANE CROSBY.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Whether his team wins or loses today in Haverhill, Coach "Jimmie" Liston of the high school football team deserves a great deal of praise for the work he has done this year in making football one of the biggest sports on the school calendar.

With the assistance of Line Coach Pierotti, he has hammered out of raw material a team that has won praise from everyone for its hard clean playing. Only once has the team been accused of playing roughly, and that was against Manchester, yet thousands of persons who viewed the game from the sidelines failed to see any roughness, noting only that the team was playing as hard as it could, and naturally the Manchester squad was playing just as determinedly. "Jimmie" has often said, and he teaches the old that it is better to lose

One would judge from the storm boards which were put on the Pawtucket bridge Wednesday that winter was with us, but yesterday's weather emphatically denied the assumption. The weather has been most enjoyable up to this time and farmers state that unless we get some rain the country will be the driest in many years. Although we have had threatening weather, little rain has fallen hereabout for over a month, and I am told it is the same way throughout the country. Many farmers who depend for their water supply on wells have had a general water famine.

Election day revolved at least one honest person in Lowell. A voter in one of the French wards, so-called, found a lady's pocketbook in the polling booth containing about six dollars in cash and other valuables. Instead of yielding to the temptation to secretly put the purse in his pocket, he notified the police of the find and left the pocketbook at the police station. It is still there awaiting identification.

Recreant naughty felines who run away from home and exercise by climbing to the tops of tall trees or the ridgepoles of houses and barns, is the easiest thing. Assistant H. R. Baker of Lowell Humane society does.

More than one cat's life—the first or the ninth, as the case may be—has been saved by the society athlete, who counts the day lost when he doesn't have to shimmy up a telephone pole to bring down a tabby or a Tom that failed to map out his trail toward the skids so it could make the return trip with a slip or a tumble. Thursday night, the Humane society received a hasty call from a well known resident of Rogers street. "Fuzzy" had been missing—the pet cat of the house kitchen—and its owner finally located it mousing in fright, crouched atop the house ridgepole. Assistant Baker shaved the Ford across lots to get to the rescue. It was growing dark. Begging "Fuzzy" to move down as far as the gutter did not good. Baker resolved to climb the roof somehow. The sun went down just as he sped a convenient skylight on the west side of the house. He took the inside staircase to the attic, managed to open the skylight and climb outside without slipping on the dry, smooth roof, and finally crept to the ridgepole, fought with "Fuzzy," who didn't seem glad, and finally got back to terra firma, put "Fuzzy" in his owner's arms and easily lotted down in his well filled notebook: "Mut No. 54 saved from the gas house."

How This Woman Got Strength

Put Up 300 Quarts Fruit, 500 Glasses Jelly and Took Care of Four Children

Norwalk, Ia.—"I have been meaning for some time to write and tell you how much good your medicine has done me. When I started to take it I was almost bed fast and would have been in bed all the time if I had had any one to care for my children. There was so much swelling and pain that I could hardly take a step. I took seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and found that so healing. I am not entirely well yet for I was in bad shape when I started your medicine, but I am so much better that I am not afraid to recommend it, it will cure me. I have done my work all alone this summer, caring for four children, and I canned 300 quarts of fruit and made 600 glasses of jelly, so you see I must be better. I feel pretty good all the time and I am glad to tell others about the medicine."—Mrs. C. J. WENNERMARK, Box 141, Norwalk, Iowa.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

STAR AND DURANT SALES AND SERVICE

The popular Star and Durant motor cars are winning more friends every week in Lowell and vicinity. The Sunday tourist lines on the Daniel Webster highway and an increasing number of the moderate-priced, sturdy, always efficient Stars and Durants on the right of way. Beauty and comfort, splendid power, smooth running, noiseless mechanical construction, make these wonderful motor cars most desirable for persons preferring moderate priced cars of sterling quality and long service.

Del's busy garage, at 682 Aiken street, has had a prosperous season distributing the famous new cars, both in sales and service stations. Short demonstrations satisfy purchasers, who are always delighted with the comfort of the sealing arrangements, the design and construction of the cars and they are snappy, up-to-date on the road. As hill climbers, the Stars and Durants cannot be excelled.

The prices for the latest models are so low for the values given, that business at Del's garage was never better and orders for 1925 deliveries have quickened as winter nears and owners of cars of other makes that are due for the dead turn to 682 Aiken street to pick out and look over the late new models.

City Primaries Next Tuesday
Continued

Once in the field of nine candidates for mayor, 39 candidates for councilor, and 10 for school committee, interest is bound to be wide-spread.

Not for several years has active street campaigning by mayoral aspirants been confined to such a restricted period of time, only one week being available for the "heavy stuff" because of national and state campaigns extending right up to last Monday night.

Beginning on Wednesday, however, under-the-stars oratory began to take shape and ever since municipal spell-binding has had the call over all other outdoor sports. It will be going full blast tonight, personal and quoted work will mark the Sabbath and then it will break out again on Monday to reach a climax at a public political forum at the Memorial Auditorium at night, with upwards of 20 candidates due to speak, each for three minutes.

Poll will be open Tuesday from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m., the usual primary hours, that have prevailed since the 1st noon to 9 p.m. schedule was discarded a few years ago.

While the ballot will not be difficult to handle, the appearance on it of 58 names of candidates, will make counting none too easy and complete returns probably will not be available until considerably after midnight. Indications as to nominees, however, should be available comfortably earlier and if present officers carry out the instructions of the commission as to procedure in counting the mayoralty votes, those telephone results should not be any later than 10 p.m. in arriving at city hall.

There will be no referenda on the city ballot and in no manner will it compare with the bulky ballots of national elections.

Elections officials feel now that it will be better to have two police officers on duty at each polling booth at all times and unless plans are changed before Tuesday the police department will be asked to make such provisions in marking out assignments of patrolmen.

The list of mayoralty candidates includes Mayor John J. Donovan, who seeks renomination, and Thomas H. Braden, Thomas J. Corbett, George H. Brown, Stephen C. Garrity, Frank A. Wurneck, James J. Bruin, Samuel Scott and Thomas F. McGratty. The six present councillors-at-large seek renomination and Thomas B. Dunphy, James H. Riley and Donald M. Cameron, now serving on the school committee, seek another term.

CHEESE LADIES' ASSOCIATION

An open meeting Wednesday, when a governing board and other officials will be named.

THERE IS THE GRAVE OF THE "LITTLE ANGEL" of Allyn, Mont., a gold-mining town that flourished 30 years ago. The "little angel" was honored by the rough miners and gamblers of the town because of her virtue and benevolence in this hostile environment. When she died, every man in the town carried a stone from the nearby mountainside, and this cairn was heaped upon her grave.

The plane is built almost entirely out of specially treated duralumin, the metal used in the construction of the great dirigible Shenandoah.

"MARS II" IS MASCOT to the United States coast guard crew stationed at the mouth of the Chicago river. The original Mars, known to the captain of almost every lake vessel, used to bark whenever a steamer went by. And the boat would salute him with blasts of their whistles. This dog is being trained to imitate his predecessor.

Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 22

Both of Jack's pets seemed to sense that they were going to be left behind. Flop scampered up the elephant's trunk and hopped up on Jack's arm and hung on tight. Flip raced ahead of the elephant and barked loudly. The hoot-hunter, however, came down out of the tower and got them both.

With great strides the elephant soon carried Jack and the hunter out of sight of the tower. And Jack was suddenly startled when he heard a low howl. Instantly the elephant stopped short, and the hunter raised a gun to his shoulder. They were just a short distance from a tiger.

"You had better crouch down and keep out of the way," said the hunter. "When the tiger realizes that we see him, he will likely spring at the elephant." So Jack got down on his knees and peered over the side of the box. Then he shouted, "There's the tiger, in that clump of bushes." (Continued.)

While Daddy Gander took the cook back to Yum Yum Land, on his magic dust-pan, something else was happening up in the sky.

A wind came along and blew away the cloud that held up the House-That-Jack-Built.

And then as the cloud was passing the highest mountain in the world, it left the house stroking on the mountain peak like a bird-house on a pole.

And the Twins were in it!

"Oh goodness!" cried Nancy. "How shall we ever get down?"

"Easy as pie," declared Nick. "What are our magic green shoes for?"

"I know," said Nancy. "But they won't do any good. We'd have to leave Jack's house up here and I'd be ashamed to go back without it. Besides we never could remember how to get back."

Suddenly they heard a laugh. "Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho!" said a voice.

"What are friends for, I'd like to know? Didn't I tell you a long time ago let me know if you needed help? That's no way to treat an old friend."

CHANGES IN PERSONNEL OF HOUSE AND SENATE COMMITTEES

General Shakeup as Result of Tuesday's Election—Fewer Than a Dozen Changes, However, In Chairmen Will Be Necessary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—While there will be a general shakeup in the personnel of house and senate committees as a result of Tuesday's election, fewer than a dozen changes of importance in chairmen will be necessary. At least three vacancies, caused by death, however, will have to be filled before the expiration of the present congress.

Death of Senators Coll, of Rhode Island, and Brandegee, of Connecticut, leaves the chairmanships of the immigration and judiciary committees vacant, while in the house the merchant marine committee is without a chairman due to the death of Representative Greene of Massachusetts.

Senator Sterling of South Dakota is ranking republican on the senate immigration committee, but he will not be in the senate after March 4.

Senator Johnson of California will be in line for chairman. Senator Borah of Idaho is the ranking republican member of the judiciary committee on which Reed Smoot of Utah is the ranking republican, while Senator Moses of New Hampshire, will be in line for chairman of the postoffice committee at the expiration of Senator Sterling's term.

After March 4, Senator Cumming will be relieved of the duties of senate presiding officer and will be in position to resume chairmanship of the inter-state commerce committee, if the republican majority sees fit to displace Senator Smith, democrat, of South Carolina, who has been serving in that capacity.

In the house, Representative Keller of Minnesota, a La Follette supporter, is in line for the claims committee.

Senator Bursum, of New Mexico, who has been defeated for re-election on the face of incomplete returns, is chairman of the senate pensions committee on which Reed Smoot of Utah is the ranking republican, while Senator Moses of New Hampshire, will be in line for chairman of the postoffice committee at the expiration of Senator Sterling's term.

After March 4, Senator Cumming will be relieved of the duties of senate presiding officer and will be in position to resume chairmanship of the inter-state commerce committee, if the republican majority sees fit to displace Senator Smith, democrat, of South Carolina, who has been serving in that capacity.

In the house, Representative Keller of Minnesota, a La Follette supporter, is in line for the claims committee.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

PRES. COOLIDGE BUSY

Goes Forward With Plans—Commission to Investigate Agriculture

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Coolidge went forward today with his post-election plans, the first of which was set in motion yesterday with the appointment of the commission to investigate agricultural conditions.

A conference of the commission, comprising eight representatives of farming interests drawn from practically all sections of the country, is expected to be called for the middle of this month.

Robert D. Carey of Careyhurst, Wyo., former governor of that state, is chairman and the membership, it was indicated, may be increased.

With the appointment of this voluntary body, President Coolidge carried out one of the few proposals he advanced in accepting the nomination of the party as standard bearer. He hopes to have its legislative recommendations before him in time for action at the coming short session of congress.

Mr. Coolidge is of the opinion that present needs would not warrant the calling of a special session of the new congress before its regular meeting in December next year. Nor does he believe it feasible to bring up again with the present congress, which passes out of existence March 4, problems of tax reduction.

Recent lights on the landing field were put out of commission when the fire damaged the electric plant in the hangar and officials arranged for the westbound mail pilot due before dawn to be signaled to alight at Burns field, thirty miles east of Cheyenne.

Request that reserve planes be sent from Rock Springs, Rawlins and North Platte, Neb., assured keeping the mail ships moving on, it was said.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 8.—Seven airplanes and the air mail hangar here were destroyed by fire early today. The loss was estimated at $100,000. No one was injured.

The fire started when man working under a plane broke an electric light globe, sparks igniting the gasoline soaked flooring.

Contos Tried to Beat Insurance Company

Contos, was fined $50 and sentenced to one year in the house of correction on a finding of guilty to the charge in district court this morning. The imprisonment was suspended for a year, however, and Contos was placed on probation for a period of two years.

His case was the first of its kind to come to the attention of the local court. Some time ago, Contos reported to the Boston police that his truck had been stolen in Boston. When it was not recovered in due time, he went to the office of Daniel O'Brien, Lowell representative for the Old Colony Insurance company, and put in a claim for $1250 to cover the theft.

Meanwhile, the police received information to the effect that the truck had been dismantled and its parts deposited in the Shawmeadow and other streams in Wilmington. With grappling irons, Captain Petrie and Lieutenant Maher finally recovered enough parts of the machine from the waters to make identification possible. Contos was arrested and admitted the deed.

WHERE THEY HAD NO VOTE

Although (and because) the District of Columbia is the seat of our government its inhabitants have no voice in the election of President. So on election day women of the various parties displayed locked ballot boxes as propaganda to gain the franchise for Washington voters in future elections.
